Y. D. FACES ITS FIRST DEFEAT

Unless Final Day's Contributions Show Big Gain, Drive for Club Will Fail

Friends of the Y. D. today have their last chance to give.

While contributions received in this morning's mail for the $200,000 memorial clubhouse fund of the Yankee Division exceeded those of any other single day during the week's drive, the total was far from that required in order to put the project over the top.

Unless a tremendous impetus marks the last day's activities, the drive will have failed of its object, and the world war heroes of New England will have suffered their first defeat.

Will the "Go-Through Friends of the Y. D."—those whose names were to have been inscribed on a roll of honor as having been the donors of the clubhouse—allow this? General Charles H. Cole, in charge of the drive, assisting officials believe that New England will at the last moment "come up to scratch" and show that it has not forgotten the glorious record of the heroes of "New England's Own," and what it owes them.

LIST OF LATE DONORS.

A number of large contributions have been added, making the total this morning $15,500. Still nearly half of the fund remains to be subscribed. The late donations include:

Lee, Higginson & Co.	$2,500
Hayden, Stone & Co.	2,500
Congressman Alvan T. Fuller	1,000
United Drug Co.	750
W. H. McElwain Co.	500

Carter, Rice & Co. Corp.	100
Stone & Forsyth Co.	100
The Amase Company	100
Charles Whiting	50
John T. Hosford	50

Small contributions exceeded all records thus far in the drive.

The number of names to be entered in the "Go-Through Friends of the YD" book, the book that is to be a permanent record of the club and be

JITNEYS RULED OFF STREETS OF SALEM

Governor Also Orders Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway to Restore Service

Salem jitneys must be off the streets of that city by Sunday morning or suffer arrest.

Also the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company must furnish adequate trolley service by that time or the trustees will be removed.

This was the ultimatum of Governor Coolidge after a public hearing and a later conference in the executive chamber.

Attorney-General Wyman gave it as his opinion that the Salem jitneys were being operated illegally. City Solicitor Michael H. Sullivan of Salem said that the city officials would not prosecute the jitneys, but would defend them if proper transportation was not furnished by the trolley line. If the service was furnished Salem would assist the State in the prosecution of the jitney men, he said.

Tomorrow State Fire Marshal Neal will go to Salem. He will decide with the local chief of police whether or not the service furnished by the trolley line is adequate. If it is adjudged adequate the jitneys will be ordered off the streets and if their drivers refuse they will be arrested.

At the conference following the public hearing were the Governor, Attorney-General Wyman, Mayor Denis Sullivan of Salem, City Solicitor Michael H. Sullivan and Homer Loring and Arthur G. Wadleigh, the last two trustees of the trolley company.

DESCHANEL PRESIDENT OF FRANCE

President of Deputies Is Elected as Successor of Poincare

By International News Service.

Paris, Jan. 17.—Paul Eugene Louis Deschanel, veteran president of the Chamber of Deputies and political enemy of Premier Clemenceau, was elected President of the French republic today, succeeding Raymond Poincare.

He received 734 out of the 889 votes cast.

Jonnart received sixty-six votes, Clemenceau, fifty-six; Bourgeois, six, and Sadoul, one.

M. Clemenceau had withdrawn his candidacy when it became apparent that factions of the radical and conservative parties were determined to oppose him and support M. Deschanel.

It is understood that the Clemenceau Cabinet will resign at once. President Poincare is being mentioned as the new Premier.

M. Deschanel is in his 64th year and has been in public life for forty years. He was elected vice-president of the Chamber of Deputies in 1896, and two years later was made president. He held the post four years, but relinquished it for another post. He was again chosen president of the chamber in 1912, and held the office up to the time of his elevation to the presidency. He has written a number of book on political economy.

M. Deschanel and M. Clemenceau have been at odds over political matters for many years. It was revealed a few days before the election that they had fought a duel in 1894 over a newspaper attack made by Clemenceau following an incident in the Chamber of Deputies. M. Deschanel was slightly wounded.

SCHOOLHOUSE IN WINTHROP IS BURNED

The Highland Grammar School, located on the top of Winthrop Highlands, was destroyed by fire today, affording a spectacle which was visible for miles.

Winthrop and Revere firemen, assisted by 150 soldiers from Fort Banks, fought for hours to extinguish the blaze, but were successful only in preventing its spread to neighboring residences. The cause was unknown.

Hundreds of children gathered to watch the fire, with mingled feelings of hope that they would remain to attend school for some time, and sorrow over the loss of thrift stamps which they had saved.

The school was a two and one-half story wooden structure of nine rooms, located on Almont street, and was attended by 325 pupils, the highest grade being the seventh.

The fire was discovered by the janitor, James A. Floyd, while working on the first floor shortly before 11 o'clock.

Before the firemen arrived the blaze was seen at Fort Banks, a short distance away. The military fire fighting detachment, together with an ambulance company, all commanded by Captain Aylward, was rushed to the school.

By this time the blaze had attained so much headway that the soldiers were unable to do anything but wait for the town firefighters.

Upon arrival of the Winthrop department, long lines of hose were laid up the hill to the blazing school. Because of the distance the pressure was found to be insufficient and help was summoned from Revere. Chief Arthur L. Kimball and Engine 1 of the Revere department responded, but when they appeared the roof of the building had fallen in and the walls went a short time later.

ADMIRAL DENIES HE PLAYED FAVORITES

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 17.—"Do not let the British pull the wool over your eyes. We would as soon fight the British as the Germans."

These were the instructions received by Admiral Sims before his departure from the United States to take command of the American fleet ovrseas during the war, he testified this afternoon before the Senate committee probing the award of navy medals and crosses by Secretary Daniels.

Admiral Sims did not reveal who gave him the order relative to the British.

LETTER CALLED CRITICAL.

That he had received such instructions was referred to in a letter from Admiral Sims to Secretary Daniels, which was made public at the hearing. It was this letter that Secretary Daniels called "critical" and did not make public.

The letter was a full review of the attitude of the department during the war. Admiral Sims charged in the letter that "The department demanded the impossible" before it approved any action.

"No policy was extended until three months after we entered the war," the letter says.

Admiral Sims denied that he favored

TRAFFIC TIED UP BY HEAVY SNOW STORM

The heaviest snowfall of the season, accompanied by a northeast wind, struck Boston and New England early today, interrupting train and car schedules and hampering shipping.

Local trains were from twenty to thirty minutes late, while the New York expresses came in from seventeen minutes to an hour behind time.

In Greater Boston the Elevated maintained fairly normal service through the all-night efforts of gangs of men and snow plows, but farther out, where hourly schedules were customary, traffic was almost paralyzed.

Suburbanites arose to find piles of snow drifted against houses, barns and fences, with every prospect that the storm would develop into a blizzard.

Shortly after 8 o'clock, however, the wind shifted to the northwest, bringing a drop in temperature of eight degrees, and a promise by the weather

SIMS TESTIFIES HE WAS ORDERED TO BEWARE OF THE BRITISH

ATTACKS CONDUCT OF NAVY

Admiral Denies He Was Guilty of Favoritism to Officers Against Men

officers to the detriment of enlisted men in recommendations for naval awards. He denied he favored "land officers" over officers on the sea in the recommendations.

Admiral Sims made public a letter sent Commander Bagley, brother-in-law of Secretary Daniels, following the Bagley award by the secretary.

"I am sorry that you should be placed in such an unfavorable light after your fine destroyer service in the war zone. I feel if you had been consulted in this you would have avoided this," Admiral Sims wrote.

SIMS SERVED ON LAND.

Answering a question by Senator Trammell, the admiral said he served on land. "My office was on land as was the headquarters of every high commander officer of the operations. It was impossible to establish headquarters on the sea," he said.

"The enemy would not come out. Hal he wished to fight, all would have commanded on the sea," he said.

Admiral Sims said the anti-submarine campaign was conducted on the patrol system when he arrived in France. The convoy system was introduced soon after the United States entered activities.

"The loss of time caused by the convoy system is such that it is not wise to begin the convoy system where speed is required," he said.

"If the white people of the world had believed that a nation would attack merchant ships, we would have built enough destroyers to defend the attacks impossible. The submarine cannot combat with the destroyer.

PRAISES "COLLEGE BOYS."

"There were very few naval officers who believed the submarine could do what it has done.

"We thought the submarine could operate only in closed waters. When we found the large ones could stay out three months, we knew that the subchaser was not effective.

"We then adopted listening devices which located the submarines."

Sims paid a high tribute to the "college boys" who manned the subchasers.

Aid was denied him for four months, Admiral Sims said, "as the only after my only aide broke down that three officers were sent me," he said in his letter.

"I was forced to take men from ships to make the administration of the fleet effective."

"It would have been difficult to conceive of a great misunderstanding of the situation abroad," the letter said.

"We will have to go to the committee or to the Senate to investigate the entire naval operations," Senator McCormick, Republican, Illinois, interjected during the reading of the letter. "It is in a terrible state."

CALLS CHARGES SERIOUS.

Senator Hale, chairman of the subcommittee, said he would ask the naval affairs committee for further authority, "in view of the serious charges."

Senator Pittman said the letter should not have been read, "because it had nothing to do with our investigation."

The complaints against the department by Admiral Sims were cited as follows:

"No policy.

"Did not have policy for three months after war started.

"During critical months of submarine campaign, department violated principles of defense.

"Navy Department did not support representatives of allied countries.

"Commandant unable to pick his aides.

"Instead of relying on those who had carried on the war the Navy Department continued its unreformed course."

'PINK NIGHTIE' HUSBAND HELD INNOCENT

Had Perfect Right in Woman's Room, Says Jury, Denying Wife Divorce

Oswego, N. Y., Jan. 17.—The wearing of a "pink nightie" by Edward H. Hoey, wealthy Oswego candy king, in a bedroom of the apartment of Mrs. Hester Wells, the night of August 3, 1918, while Mrs. Wells, as alleged was in the room attired in flimsy garments, was entirely innocent.

This was decided by the jury which heard testimony in Mrs. Eleanor M. Hoye's action for divorce when the sealed verdict was opened.

Hoey maintained throughout that he had been "framed," and when Judge Irving R. Devendorf charged the jury he instructed them to decide these two questions: First, did Hoey violate his marriage vow? Second was it with the consent and connivance of the plaintiff? Having decided the first question for the defendant, the jury did not pass upon the second.

Hoey's testimony was to the effect that on the night in question he became ill while carousing with Mrs. Wells and another woman, and that Mrs. Wells invited him to her apartment, where she gave him the "pink nightie' which he always carried in his car.

Mrs. Wells, he declared, helped him unfasten his necktie, collar and shoes, and then retired, leaving him alone and put on the "pink nightie." She came into his room later, he said, to ask if he could do anything for him, and while she was there detective burst into the room.

COLLEGES FAVOR TREATY COMPROMISE

The college students and college faculties of the country favor a compromise on the Peace Treaty. This is made clear in the revised total of the recent nation-wide intercollegiate referendum on the treaty. There were 410 colleges and universities voting. The total vote was 125,788. The vote in favor of some sort of compromise was divided, 47,370 favoring the Lodge program and 49,455 desiring a compromise between Lodge's position and that of the administration.

POSTMISTRESS GETS YEAR FOR THEFT

Burlington, Vt., Jan. 17.—In sentencing Mrs. Katherine I. Dow, twenty-eight, former postmistress at Albany, Vt., to serve one year and one day at Atlanta for the embezzlement of $3,500 from the government, Judge H. B. Howe, in the Federal District Court here, said that it was one of the saddest cases ever brought to his attention.

Mrs. Dow, who pleaded guilty to the charge, while serving as a school teacher at Albany, met and married a man who later, because of financial reverses, was not able to support even himself. It was to pay doctor's bills and other debts that induced her to steal the post-office funds, she admitted. The couple have two small children.

PETERS BLAMED IN STRIKE RIOTS BY STEVENS

Adjutant-General Accuses the Mayor of Fatal Delay in Calling for Troops

Responsibility for the police strike riots was placed squarely on the shoulders of Mayor Peters by Adjutant-General Jesse F. Stevens, in his annual report to the Governor. Adjutant-general was directed to report fatal procrastination in failing to call for State troops, a part of which were held in readiness for active duty on Tuesday evening, the day of the strike.

Furthermore, when the Mayor's precept was issued, it provided for such further delay in mobilization, that Governor Coolidge was forced to take control in order to speed up operations, Stevens declared.

The report added that preparations for the mobilization of the troops were made by the State Guard authorities early on the morning preceding the day of the strike.

SUGGESTS HIGHER PAY.

This report, which was submitted to Governor Coolidge yesterday, also recommended reorganization of the National Guard, and suggested a salary increase for the adjutant general of from $5,000 to $6,500.

The section of the report dealing with the riots stated that equipment for the 10th Regiment was shipped from the armory at Framingham and was unloaded at Boston on Monday night. This was taken to the Commonwealth Armory in order to avoid the curious.

"At 5:25 p. m. Monday, the 8th of September," the report continues, "the adjutant-general was directed to report to the Governor at the State House, and remain there over night. During the evening the adjutant-general received instructions from his excellency the commander-in-chief, the Governor's secretary and the attorney-general.

"Conditions on Tuesday grew graver, and the arrival of Mayor's precept was hourly expected. Nothing was done on Tuesday, and Tuesday night the adjutant-general men deserted their posts at 6 o'clock and left the city at the mercy of the lawless element.

READY FOR DUTY.

"Anticipating that the Mayor would issue his precept during the course of the evening, the 1st Motor Corps, which was holding its Armistice Day on that evening, was directed to remain in the armory until they should receive orders governing them. Similarly, the 1st Troop Cavalry held a drill at the Commonwealth Armory, which was dismissed at 9.

"No word having been received from the Mayor up to 11 o'clock, and no serious disturbance having been reported up to that time, the 1st Motor Corps and the 1st Troop Cavalry were called on the telephone and relieved from further duty that night.

"Shortly after midnight groups of young rowdies commenced parading the streets, breaking store windows and stealing goods from them."

"On Wednesday morning, September 10, feeling that by this time the Mayor must surely act, the senior brigade commander, with his adjutant, was summoned to the Adjutant-General's office, arriving shortly after 10 o'clock, where he waited the arrival of the precept, which came at 11:30 a. m.

"Accompanying the precept was a letter from His Honor the Mayor, informing the Governor that he had issued his precept, and that in his judgment the force so called was not adequate for the exigency which existed and that, therefore, he respectfully requested the Governor to order out additional troops, which he suggested should be not less than three regiments of infantry.

"Immediately on receipt of this communication at the State House, Brigadier-General Samuel D. Parker, the senior brigade commander, was ordered to mobilize three regiments called for by the Mayor, the 11th, 12th and 13th Regiments, and to assume command of all the forces called out. These troops were notified over the telephone by the Adjutant-General's office and reported promptly.

ORDERS MOBILIZATION.

"Upon receipt of the copy of the precept by the Governor, and upon finding that the hour for the mobilization set by the Mayor was a o'clock in the afternoon, and as there had been considerable disorder during the day following the night of rioting, the Governor ordered the Adjutant-General to direct the commanding officers to mobilize their troops forthwith and not wait for the hour set by the Mayor.

"This order was transmitted to all commanding officers over the telephone by the Adjutant-General.

Later in the afternoon after General Parker had had a conference with the Mayor and police commissioner, it was decided to order two additional regiments to mobilize, namely the 14th and 20th were notified at 6 p. m. over the telephone and by 2:30 a. m. of Thursday the entire State Guard was on duty in Boston, less than fifteen hours after the receipt of the original precept."

The report then discusses the manner in which the troops were detailed and notes that "Wednesday night passed without any serious disturbances."

Proceeding, it says:

"On Thursday, the 11th, there were one or two cases of shooting which quickly caused the people to have a wholesome respect for the State Guard, and orders given by guardsmen were promptly obeyed thereafter.

"On Thursday, the 11th, the governor, by proclamation, took over the control of the situation, and it remained in his hands from that time on."

kept forever within it in a place of honor in the library, was increased tremendously.

"The most notable feature of the contributions," said Colonel Luther, "is the eagerness with which people of humble circumstances rush to give.

"When the offensive was originally started it was hoped that 10 per cent part of the contribution would be made by the well-to-do.

"While people of larger means have responded generously, their reply to the Y.D.'s first and last request has been much less noticeable and far less impulsive than that of the poor woman to whom $1 or $2 was a large sum. To these latter the thanks of the division goes out. Such gifts are not from the pocket. They are from the heart."

SENDS MONEY FROM IRELAND.

One such as those of which Colonel Luther spoke came way from Ireland from a mother there whose boy was with the Y. D. and fell, killed in action, on October 23, 1918.

The woman was Mrs. Dennis Barry of Dunmanway, Cork County, Ireland. Last Christmas she wrote to a daughter, Mrs. Catherine Reynolds, No. 256 Main street, Charlestown, as follows:

"I am sending a little money for a Christmas gift. But this I want you to do. There is a memorial being erected for the brave lads of the Yankee Division I want you to give $2 towards it in memory of my dear boy, William, who was with B Company of the 101st Infantry."

The boy was William Barry, who lived at No. 279 Main street, Charlestown.

Then there was the response at the noon meeting at the Y. D. but on the Common. Despite the zero cold many hundreds gathered about, listened to a musical program by the Naval Band from the Charlestown Navy Yard, heard short speeches by Governor Coolidge and Major Carroll Sweat of the 101st Engineers and answered the appeals by donating a large amount of money, either directly or in payment for buttons and tags, distributed by Mrs. Nathaniel H. Emmons and Mrs. Francis J. W. Ford, who had charge of the meeting.

There was another meeting today. The band played and several former Y. D. men spoke.

The same generosity was displayed wherever Y. D. collectors went—in the hotels, where officers of the 101st Engineers Welfare Association solicited funds; in the North and South stations and at the ferry houses, where lassoes of the Salvation Army solicited.

The big drive for army recruits in Lynn will start Monday, when Mayor Cresmer and every welfare association of that city will give their interest to the movement. Shaw of the recruiting station indorsing the project of the army in making evident its educational and vocational opportunities during peace times.

Thrift Week to Help Cut Living Cost, Says Glass

Washington, Jan. 17.—The universal observance of Thrift Week, which started today, will do much toward reducing the high cost of living and otherwise bettering the economic condition of the country, in the opinion of Secretary of the Treasury Glass.

The thrift campaign was endorsed in a statement issued by the Secretary, in which he said:

"It is the hope that during this week special consideration of our people will be given to such principles of thrift as the steady purchase of government securities, having a bank account, keeping a budget, insurance and owning their own home. I commend this plan to all employes of the Treasury and suggest that they participate in any way which may be of service to themselves and to their community."

BARS TOWN HALL AT HOPKINTON TO VOTERS

Carr's Action Forces Citizens to Hold Their Special Election Elsewhere

Hopkinton, Jan. 17.—Refused admission to the Town Hall for a special election, a large crowd of Hopkinton citizens after assembling there marched to Foresters Hall and proceeded with the balloting. There were jeers and hisses for Edward Carr, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, who denied the citizens the use of the Town Hall, but the demonstration was tame compared with that of December 6, which was followed by the resignation of the superintendent of schools and several other persons.

Chairman Carr permitted the citizens to take the municipal ballot boxes to Foresters Hall, but announced the election then in no more legal than it would have been in the Town Hall."

Deputy Sheriffs William Walsh of Hopkinton, William F. Kingsbury of Holliston and Albert J. Adams of Marlboro and Special Officer William Sweatt of Hopkinton were up in front of the town hall when the first group of citizens arrived for the election which was scheduled to begin at 11:15 a. m. Patrick H. Dolan, the town clerk, ordered the doors opened shortly before that time and read the warrant for the election. He then announced that Chairman Carr had refused the use of the town hall.

Hisses and groans sounds from the assemblage for Carr's reason. The chairman then came to the door from the hall.

"I heard Mr. Day say I was afraid to come out," he said. "I am not."

The chairman remarked to newspaper representatives that there were 1500 voters in Hopkinton. There were considerably less in the crowd.

"Apparently there are some who were guided by Judge White's admonition," he said.

Judge Riley, a local attorney who was in the gathering, declared: "We don't take the law from Carr."

Clarence B. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican committee of Hopkinton, who hired the Town Hall for today's meeting from Janitor George Smith, arrived at the building early in the day and took possession. He had signed later by Chairman Carr, the man, superintendent of schools, who has been barred from school property by the Hopkinton school board.

When Chairman Carr arrived he demanded that Hamilton and Lyman leave, but Hamilton refused.

Before adjourning to Foresters Hall, Hamilton announced from the steps that although he believed the citizens had a legal right to insist upon holding the meeting in the Town Hall, he was leaving to avoid trouble.

TRAIN SERVICE DELAYED BY SNOWSTORM

Gangs Going All Night Keep ELevated Trains Moving; Temperature Rises

man that it would clear off and become colder by night.

UP TO 32 DEGREES.

At 8 o'clock the official temperature was 32 degrees, which changed to 34 at 10. The storm was moving off the coast. The mercury had climbed rapidly from 16 above at midnight to 32 at 8 o'clock, only to drop again with the change of wind.

Train service on the Boston & Maine was switched more that of normal weather. According to the station-master, local trains pulled in about five or ten minutes behind schedule time. Other trains varied from one half to one hour behind.

The Montreal train, via Rutland, was twenty-five minutes late. Montreal, Canadian Pacific, was half an hour late; also the Grand Trunk, Plymouth, N. H., and the St. John train arrived twenty-five minutes after schedule time.

WAGONS CAUGHT IN DRIFTS.

Trains on the main line of the Western Division of the Boston & Maine railroad were from ten to thirty-five minutes late. Car traffic was somewhat delayed by wagons in the drifts. Otherwise everything is normal.

Passengers on the Dedham and Franklin Street Railway were transported on foot gangways. Under normal conditions the cars on this road operate on an hourly schedule, but because of the abundance of snow all efforts were confined to keeping the tracks open. Persons who had to travel were accommodated on the big plows and enjoyed their excitement.

Night Trains on the West Roxbury, to Norwood line were running 15 to 20 minutes late. Hyde Park to Dedham, Hyde Park to Readville and Hyde Park to Mattapan lines were from 10 to 20 minutes late. Extra snowplows were working all night. Trains on the Milford and Providence Divisions of the New Haven road were half an hour late.

CARS ARE CUT OFF.

The Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn road cut down its trains to three cars each in order that schedules might be maintained. Despite the crowding and inconvenience to commuters, who were accustomed to five-car trains, there was little criticism of the hands also worked all night keeping switches open.

Until the anniversary of the big snowstorm of 1857, at which time it took three days to get into Boston from Dedham.

The New York mail train today was stalled in the tunnel and pulled into a station, the atmosphere of which resembled a London fog, the steam from the engine causing mist to form. Similar conditions obtained in the North Station.

TIES UP B. & M. TRAIN.

The storm was responsible for a tieup on the Lexington branch of the Boston & Maine road. The engine of the train scheduled to leave Bedford at 7:44 left the track just outside of the Bedford station, while making up at the Y. It was necessary to cut out the train entirely. The train leaving the Lexington station at 9 a. m. for Boston, however, picked up two of the cars of the stalled Bedford train, making the trip to Boston with the belated passengers an hour late.

On the Middlesex & Boston street railway system, the Lexington and Waltham line took off the light one-man cars, replacing them with the heavier cars of the Arlington line. The system is practically clear, snow plow crews having worked all night and early today.

With the seven or eight inches of snowfall of the past evening the ground from the last storm, there was almost a foot of snow on the ground around Boston today.

If it isn't bitter cold, it storms. When it stops storming, down will go the mercury again. So said the Weather Man, in announcing that the blizzard was practically over. Tonight it will snow a little, Sunday will be fair and the thermometer will drop a few below zero—maybe five or six degrees, possibly to zero. Commuters will have to skimp if they want to get their paths shoveled before the snow freezes. With the return of a cold wave there will be moderate to strong northwest to west winds.

The predicted drop in temperature began when the mercury fell from 32 degrees at 8 a. m. to 24 degrees at 9. The snow turned to rain in Nantucket, which at 8 a. m. was the warmest spot in New England, at 38 degrees. The coldest was Northfield, Vt., at 2 degrees. Williston, N. D., was at zero and Key West, Fla., at 72, were the extremes recorded in the whole country.

The snowfall was particularly heavy in Portland, Me., where it totaled 24 inches; Albany, N. Y., 6 to 7 inches, and Boston, 6 to 8 inches. Strong winds were blowing today, the highest being Friday, 54 an hour off Block Island and 87 miles off Highland Light.

Boston Men to Fight Short Lobster Bill in Congress

Boston lobster dealers have made arrangements to attend a hearing at Washington, on the bill in Congress to prohibit the importation of short lobsters. They will oppose the bill, as it will threaten the lobster trade between Boston and the Maritime provinces in Canada, which amounts to $4,000,000 annually.

The bill, if made law, will prohibit the importation of lobsters under 10½ inches in length. The Massachusetts law permits the taking and importation of lobsters down to nine inches long, and the law is practically the same in the states adjoining and in New York. Two thirds of our supply comes from Canada, the lobster men say, and to prohibit nine-inch lobsters from coming to Boston will mean that no Canadian lobsters will come, except in cans. The Canadian lobster fishermen, they say, will prefer to sell his whole catch to the canneries to sorting out the big ones to send to Boston.

'RED' SUSPECT PROVES HE IS A CITIZEN

Peter Frank of Swampscott, Born in Cincinnati, Freed by Federal Court

Peter Frank of Swampscott, who was taken in the roundup of "Reds" by the Department of Justice two weeks ago, established his claim to American citizenship and Judge George W. Anderson of the Federal Court ordered his discharge.

Assistant United States Attorney Lewis Goldberg told the court that the evidence showed Frank to be a citizen. He also read a letter from the Acting Secretary of Labor stating that a deportation warrant against Frank had been dismissed.

Frank brought habeas corpus proceedings on the ground that he was unlawfully deprived of his liberty. Frank is a native-born citizen of the United States. He testified that he was born in Cincinnati and had lived and voted in that city as well as in St. Louis, Brockton and Lynn.

He offered an affidavit from his father, in which the latter says he is a citizen. He also filed a letter from the city clerk of Cincinnati stating that birth records were kept in that city at the time Frank was born, but that for some reason the record was not in court.

Immigration officials at Deer Island have completed their labors comparatively thirty-five of the 435 alleged enemies of the government. About twenty have been released, six ordered deported and the others on bail. Those confined at the Island whose hearings have been finished will be admitted to bail as fast as bondsmen can be found.

Hearings will be rushed the coming week, with more inspectors on the island daily from 9:30 a. m. to 4 p. m.

U. S. AGENTS FIND CAFES OBEY LAW

Deputies were sent out by Acting Collector Andrew J. Casey Friday night to every hotel and places where liquor was sold. These men made themselves known to the managers and said they were there to see that the law was complied with and to collect complaints if the law was observed. They returned after 11 and found that most of the hotels had closed their dining rooms at that hour. In no case was a violation of the law noted.

The deputies were later sent on a tour of inspection through all hotels, clubs, cafes and restaurants where liquor was formerly served. No violations of the law were reported.

SAYS McADOO IS IN RACE FOR PRESIDENCY

Friend Asserts He Is Playing Good Politics; Hoover Also a Candidate

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 17.—William Gibbs McAdoo will be a candidate for the presidency. This positive assertion was made here today by a friend of the former Secretary of the Treasury, and one of the "inners" of the McAdoo circle in New York.

There are those in Washington who just as categorically affirm that Herbert Hoover, former food administrator, is in the race and will remain there long after some of those whose booms, now already well advanced, are mere political memories.

"McAdoo," his friend declares, "is merely playing good politics in keeping his boom deflated. His name will be brought forward in due time, never fear, and the San Francisco convention next June will have ample occasion to pronounce upon it."

The speaker has the reputation of knowing more of the inside of what is going on in New York and Washington than almost any other man. He is not and never has been an office seeker, but is a wealthy New Yorker, wh has for years wielded considerable influence in the East. His name is withheld at his own request.

McAdoo's absence from the Jackson day dinners here was considered by the same authority as masterful politics.

"One thing seems to have generally escaped the attention of press and public alike," he said, "and that was that though McAdoo declined the invitation of the Democratic National Committee on the ground of being an exceedingly busy man, it was he who perhaps more than any one else guided the keynote of the Jackson Day banquet.

"Merely read out as it was by the toastmasters at the two dinners, it failed to get the attention there that it deserved and will get in the issue. For if you will but consider this Wichita Falls message of McAdoo's and the issue he puts forward it is a whole platform for the party, compact from domestic policy to foreign relations.

"Reduction of war taxes; prompt restoration of the law; peace; legislation on international financial and economic questions; improved relations between capital and labor; protection of the public against needless industrial disputes; promotion of the welfare of our soldiers and sailors; freedom of speech and of the press in time of peace; progress by ballot instead of by bullet; law and order; prosecution of profiteering; protection of honest business; protection of American citizens in every land; America as a dominant influence for good in the world.

SOME OF THE PLANKS.

"There are some of these planks—real, progressive planks—Penny how nearly everybody overlooked that speech, for that is what it was. A speech by wire, not to the Democratic party alone, but to millions of voters scattered throughout the land.

"Another thing I might call your attention to is, though McAdoo had too much business on hand a week ago to shift a date and be present at the Jackson Day rally, he and Senator Hitchcock left Washington day before yesterday for the South, where they are squeezing in a few days' shooting.

NEW "BACKLESS" MODE WORRIES BRITONS

London, Jan. 17 My dear, how can it be done in comfort?

This new and perplexing problem of the new backless mode in dresses, according to "Priscilla," who writes from the north, isn't how to keep warm though unclothed, or how to display seductive ankles that must be hidden in winter Russian boots, but—

How to display one's back to its best advantage when sitting in a box, yet keep an eye on the stage at the same time!"

POLICE KEEP SHARP WATCH FOR ILLEGAL HANDLING OF LIQUOR

CARRIERS MUST GET LICENSE

It isn't very dangerous to carry liquor about today, not much more dangerous than carrying a package of "T. N. T."

Police Commissioner Curtis has issued an order anent the carrying of liquor, which leaves no doubt that, legally, John Barleycorn is dead.

Any person discovered in the act of illegally transporting or receiving intoxicating liquor is subject to arrest. Worse, the liquor and "vehicle" are subject to seizure. And there are mighty few ways of legally transporting liquor since we entered the Sahara.

Brethren of the pocket flask, here is the order. Read and ponder:

"Members of the force are notified that on and after 12:01 a. m. of January 17, 1920, the transportation of alcoholic liquor is illegal, except under the following circumstances:

"The transportation of alcoholic liquor for beverage purposes is prohibited under any and all circumstances excepting that a person holding a special permit from the Federal authorities, which special permit is issued only to persons who, having stocks of liquor properly in their homes at the present time, wish to transfer the said liquor to another home, may transport in accordance with said permit.

"This may occur either when the person is changing his residence permanently or when the person is changing from his Winter to his Summer residence. The transportation made by the person himself, personally, or by some one holding a permit from the Federal authorities to transport such liquor.

WILL ISSUE PERMITS.

"The Federal authorities will issue permits to transport non-beverage alcohol to carriers such as railroads, steamship companies, express companies, truckmen, etc., and the permit will be known as 1405C. The said holders of permits and none others may transport non-beverage alcohol. Carriers holding such permits may deliver such non-beverage alcohol to such consignees as hold a permit, known as Form 72, to receive the same.

"Careful note is to be made of the fact that the permit held by the consignee will designate the exact goods that he is permitted to receive and that in each case the officer by inspecting the permit will be able to determine whether or not the carrier is properly delivering the goods.

"If the consignee is a natural person he must receive and sign for the goods himself, excepting that if it is impossible for him to receive it personally he may furnish the carrier with an affidavit to that effect and the carrier may then deliver the liquor to the person designated in writing as an agent of the consignee.

MUST HAVE CONSIGNEE.

"Where the consignee is a corporation the corporation must designate in writing some person authorized to receive shipments of liquor consigned to it, and the person transporting the liquor must receive a copy of such designation before he delivers the liquor to such agent.

"No person shall transport intoxicating liquor nor shall any person receive any liquor from any person transporting same unless the package containing such liquor bears a label containing, where applicable, the following information:

"1. Name, address and permit number of the consignor.

"2. Name and address of the consignee and number of permit to purchase held by him.

"3. Kind and quantity of liquor contained therein.

KEEP ON RECORD.

"All persons hauling permits to transport intoxicating liquor are required to keep a record in book form at the point of shipment, containing, in so far as applicable, the following information covering each package of liquor received by them for transportation:

"1. Name, address and permit number of the consignor.

"2. Name and address of the consignee and number of permit to purchase held by him.

"3. Kind and quantity of liquor contained in package.

"4. Date of shipment.

"(a) Where the person transporting intoxicating liquor is a railroad, express company or other common carrier, he may upon receipt of a package containing liquor, issue a bill of lading or express receipt, etc., in duplicate, the information specified above to be entered thereon in such manner as to insure legibility and permanency for the original which bill of lading, express receipt, etc., is to be given to the consignee or his agent.

DANGER OF ARREST.

"The duplicate copy, if retained by the carrier and kept by him in a binder or file separate from other records, will answer the above requirement as to records.

"Any person discovered in the act of illegally transporting or receiving intoxicating liquor is subject to arrest and the liquor and vehicle is subject to seizure. In these cases, the officer in charge of the case will communicate with the revenue agent's office at No. 80 Boylston street, Room 726; telephone Beach 2130," William J. McCarthy, supervising agent in charge, will receive instructions from there as to the place and method of prosecuting the case in the Federal Courts.

"In this class of cases any bail commissioner may hold the man to bail for his appearance before the United States Commissioner.

"The permits so far mentioned will be signed either by the Collector of Internal Revenue for this district or by the Director for the Enforcement of Prohibition for this district."

Police Get 83 in Last Big Roundup of Liquor Lovers

What the police believe will be the last big roundup of "drunks" for many years was made last night.

Five women and seventy-eight men who had been sitting up at John Barleycorn's wake drowned their grief and surreptitiously that they were arrested on the way home.

Several of the police stations were crowded and the overjoyed mourners spent most of the night. Most of the prisoners were released today.

MAY COOK LUNCHES IN SCHOOLS AT LAWRENCE

Lawrence, Jan. 17.—Mayor William P. White plans to have cooking taught in the grammar schools and will seek to have it made possible for pupils to cook free lunches for themselves at recess time. He will make the recommendations at the next meeting of the School Board. He believes that the city should, at small cost, provide lunches for the children, and thinks it would encourage the attendance. He says: "I don't mean free dinners," said Mayor White, "but light and substantial lunches which will make conditions more homelike."

FILE BILL FOR STATE PROBE OF LABOR

Brookline Solons Seek Inquiry Into All Wage-Earners' Organizations

A bill to investigate organized labor in this State was filed with the House clerk by Representatives Waldron and Fish, Republicans, of Brookline.

For the appointment of a public receiver, at $20,000 a year, to whom the stockholders of public utility corporations may vote to turn their property over to.

The complainant charges her attacker was guided to the room she occupied by a hotel employe.

BABY WEIGHS 45 POUNDS; IS 15 MONTHS OLD

Thomas Joseph Duffey, 3d, of Revere, raised on milk, and who may some time put his 130-pound father in the light-weight class.

What Sampson, Goliath, Atlas and other ancient and notable mighties tipped the old stone scales at in pounds is not a matter of record, but it is seldom today that one hears of a youngster fifteen months and three days who will swing the needle on an honest-weight, upright scale to 45½ pounds.

Thomas Joseph Duffey, 3d, who, with his parents, resides at No. 303 Beach street, Revere, appears to be well entitled on a flourishing career as a "strong man." Weighing but six pounds and seven ounces when he was born, Thomas now holds the title of being the biggest baby for his age on record locally.

When asked the secret of the child's rapid gain today, Mrs. Duffey, the mother, smiled at her 130-pound husband and stated that the boy had been supplied with all the good rich cow's milk he could handle. Recently he has been making headway with two baked potatoes and bread and milk. In addition to his five bottles of milk per day. The father says Thomas 3rd "eats as much as a hired man."

When it comes to taking the baby on an outing, father gets out the strength accumulator. He is frank to admit that the job of "carrying the baby" is a form of employment that paralyzes the arms.

Thomas Joseph Duffey, Sr., is well known to baseball fans as an old-timer of the New England League and the Maryland team. His weight is 145 pounds, while Thomas Joseph Duffey, Jr., comes next at 130 followed by Thomas Joseph Duffey, 3d, who at the present rate will shortly outstrip the family.

TO URGE CHANGE IN PRISON

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 17.—Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt will make recommendations that the naval prisons at Portsmouth, N. H., and Portsmouth, S. C., be placed under direct supervision of the Judge Advocate-General, he announced today.

The recommendation is the result of a recent investigation made by Assistant Secretary Roosevelt at Portsmouth.

Investigation of alleged charges of immorality at the Portsmouth prison is still going on, it was announced. Mr. Roosevelt stated, however, that in regard to charges that objectionable characters were being sent back to duty in wholesale numbers, he had found that there had been but four such cases in two years.

In these cases two of the men were sent back to duty upon recommendations of their commanding officers, and two because of insufficient evidence.

TWO MANHOLES BLOW UP IN WORCESTER

Worcester, Jan. 17.—One man was seriously injured, several others slightly hurt and hundreds others were panic-stricken today when two manhole covers weighing 75 pounds each were catapulted into the air by gases generated from fire in a wire conduit of the Worcester Consolidated Street Railway Company.

The manhole covers flew off at the junctions of Main and Austin and Main and Federal streets, two blocks apart.

That at the former spot went into the air fifty feet and came down in a lot.

One piece struck sixty-nine-year-old James Babbitt, an employe of the street department who was shoveling snow, breaking a leg.

Mrs. Chandler Bullock was slightly hurt when the concussion smashed the windshield of an automobile she was driving.

The cover at Federal street struck a car, knocking down a dozen passengers and the car crew. One of the freaks of the affair was noted when a team was turned completely around.

Trolley service was suspended more than three hours while the flames coming from the manholes were extinguished and the damage repaired.

WALSH TO RUN ON ANTI-WILSON PLATFORM

Senator to Be Candidate for Delegate to Convention, Opposed to Administration

United States Senator David I. Walsh has decided to be a candidate for delegate-at-large to the Democratic national convention on an anti-Wilson, anti-administration platform.

This important announcement, authorized by a source as close as can be to Senator Walsh, forecasts the most serious, wide-open split within the Democratic ranks in the recent history of Massachusetts politics.

The junior Senator, whose record shows him to be one of the most powerful and popular vote-getters the State has ever known, has determined to run on an anti-Wilson League of Nations platform, if the league is an issue at that time.

Whether or not the league differences are patched up, Senator Walsh will campaign with a slate of delegates opposed to Palmer, Meddon, Baker or any of the administration candidates whose election would be construed as an indorsement of President Wilson, his League of Nations and his after-the-war policies.

MAY SEEK SECOND PLACE.

In his campaign, Senator Walsh and his friends will oppose the election of any at-large and district delegates who attempt to secure election on a Wilsonian platform. They will oppose any and all the federal officeholders who run for the convention.

If Herbert Hoover measures up to the requirements of progressivism and liberalism, Senator Walsh and his friends will probably support him in the convention.

In the event that Hoover or some Western liberal Democrat is nominated, Senator Walsh will be put to the use of his name as a Democratic candidate for Vice-President of the United States.

Daniel A. Doherty, the Westfield whip manufacturer, District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier and either Colonel William A. Gaston or Richard H. Long will probably compose the ticket with Senator Walsh.

Colonel Gaston has been an anti-administration man for some time; in fact, since the first charge that the Colonel was anti-Wilson the last time Mr. Wilson was elected. Mr. Long has been anti-administration during and since the last election.

NOT TO BE A MARTYR.

Senator Walsh is determined not to be made a martyr by the Wilson administration. He has told his friends that if the Wilson party delegates, as they did in 1916, have a voice in the selection of Bay State candidates for Federal appointment the Senator will decline to run on a test against a league covenant that he believed to be un-American, then the Wilson party must pay the penalty of it in this State. In other words, he is ready to go to the people and let them decide who was right.

The Senator's friends feel that he, as a candidate for Vice-President, would save the party from the schism which President Wilson's recent policies have made in it and would be of tremendous help to a man like Hoover.

FIRE THREATENS TREMONT ST. STRUCTURE

Fire, starting on the fourth floor of a six-story brick building at No. 628 Tremont street, caused several thousand dollars' damage early today and threatened to destroy the entire building, a strong wind fanning the blaze. Hard work on the part of firemen, however, soon averted disaster.

Flames were discovered on the fourth floor, occupied by the Boston Artificial Limb Company, by Sergeant Thomas Harvey of the Lagrange street police station. When the first apparatus arrived the flames had not reached the fifth floor and the intense smoke hampered the firemen in their work.

Considerable damage was suffered by water and smoke to the Jerry D'Avolio Company's stock, dealers in musical instruments. It is thought that this company will be the principal loser.

Asserts London Is Fastest Moving City in World

London, Jan. 17.—"London is the fastest-moving city in the world, even faster than New York and Chicago," Lord Ashfield, formerly Sir Albert Stanley, head of London's underground railway system, told the American Luncheon Club here.

"The people of London," he continued, "have forgotten the art of walking. London's eight million inhabitants make 295 journeys per capita per annum—which is the world's record.

"The only solution of future traffic congestion is the establishment of a universal system of underground tubes exclusively for fleet automobile traffic, connecting the outskirts of the city with the motor boulevards."

DeKAY GIRL ON WAY TO EUROPE IS THEORY

Missing Heiress May Have Sailed for France With Rumanian Woman

Providence, Jan. 17.—Jeanne Anna DeKay, the missing twenty-year-old heiress who disappeared from Hull House, Chicago, eighteen days ago, may have sailed for Europe with her Rumanian friend, Mme. Dedea Salter. This was the theory today, following a report that Mme. Salter sailed for Havre, France, last Saturday, via Cherbourg.

The DeKay girl, who recently returned from Switzerland, where she visited her father, John W. DeKay, friends went friendly on the voyage home with the Rumanian woman, and since her disappearance fitfle efforts have been made to locate Miss. Salter.

Mrs. Gertrude Howe Britton of Hull House, Chicago, has declared it as her belief that Jeanne committed suicide, saying that the girl had been greatly depressed since her return from Switzerland, and that on the day she left Hull House she took with her no money or toilet articles, and only a scanty supply of clothing. Other reports said that the girl had contracted a marriage there.

Henry E. DeKay of Ashburn, Va., an uncle of the missing young woman, scouted the theory of suicide, saying that "only cowards commit suicide," and that Jeanne was "no coward, I'll be bound." He is still in Chicago, but is expected in this city before his return home.

ELEVATED TELLS WHY THE CARS ARE COLD

"A complaint has been voiced in regard to the cold cars and in case it might be of interest to patrons to know that the provision of service under the conditions as they exist with the thermometer ranging in different parts of the system from 4 to 16 below zero, and with a considerable fall of snow on the ground, present most difficult problems of operation.

"In order to prepare cars for service, heat is turned on in the early hours of the morning, as it is essential for ensuring proper operation, of equipment at the time cars start. Assuming a proper temperature in the car as it leaves the terminal, it must be appreciated that making stops every few hundred feet, as is the case during rush hours, allows an inrush of extremely cold air under present conditions which makes it very difficult to maintain satisfactory temperature in the cars.

"It should also be appreciated that with the amount of snow on the streets of Boston, it is impossible during snow onto the track, which creates a condition of poor traction and in some cases becomes totally stalled in the path of cars. All of these conditions naturally combine to make traffic and material delays are bound to occur, and cannot be overcome under normal weather conditions and when they occur under the extreme conditions they are a matter of great annoyance and inconvenience to passengers.

SERVICE MEN DEMAND NEW PROBE IN DEAN MURDER

East Jaffrey, N. H., Jan. 17.—There is dissension among the members of the James H. Mathewson Post of this town over the question whether men of the American Legion have the right to demand investigation of the murder of Dr. William Kendrick Dean and the punishment of his slayers.

The Selectmen asked the members of the James H. Mathewson Post to pass resolutions, feeling that the men who served in the World War could, by their endorsement, greatly aid them in their uphill fight to have the tragedy cleared to the satisfaction of the people hereabouts.

The resolution was offered at a recent meeting of the post and was rejected by methods which displeased many of the members, including many who fought overseas.

The remonstrants claimed that there was nothing in the resolution which would prevent a post of the American Legion endorsing it. They said the fact that Dr. Dean, a respected citizen of this town for more than thirty years and a patriotic American, had been killed by enemy agents when he attempted to give important information to the Federal authorities about spy activities, made it a matter peculiarly pertinent to the spirit of the American Legion.

It was also pointed out that Dr. Dean had liberally subscribed for Liberty Bonds, had manifested an unusual interest in the war developments and in the American troops, had often stated that he regretted that he did not have a son to send to France, and that he was too old to shoulder a gun himself.

It was his discoveries of traitorous activities on the part of those who were operating night signals in the mountains here that led to his death. Members who were anxious to support the resolution on this account claimed that a little clique of three or four engineered matters in such a way as to stifle them.

CLAIM HILDRETH HEDGED

The remonstrants say that the resolutions were killed on the plea that for members of the American Legion to ask that the death of Dr. Dean be avenged, would be equivalent to mixing in politics, a claim which members of the Legion in Massachusetts roundly condemn.

Massachusetts posts are ready to pass resolutions on the Dean case, claiming that any American citizen who was killed by enemy agents should have the support and sympathy of every member of the American Legion.

The Selectmen gave the resolutions to L. B. Hatch, who was unable to be present at the meeting. He turned the resolutions over to Post Commander William W. Hildreth. Hildreth left his chair and took the floor, appointing Homer J. Deschenes to preside temporarily.

Dissatisfied members claim that Hildreth, instead of putting the resolutions before the meeting, talked against them. Hildreth denies this. He says that certain members confused the resolutions with a petition and that they wanted to sign them.

He admits that he did not think the resolutions were proper for action and that he sent copies to Orville Kane of Keene, State Commander of the American Legion. He said he received a letter a day or two later containing a ruling by the executive committee to the effect that resolutions on the Dean case were out of order, but that there was nothing in the by-laws to prevent members acting as individuals.

DRAW UP COMPROMISE.

As a result of this ruling, Commander Hildreth, himself, drafted a preamble for a petition which he considered a safe compromise. This petition read:

"We, the undersigned, members of the James B. Mathewson Post, No. 11, American Legion, being of the opinion that Dr. William Kendrick Dean, a loyal American citizen and a resident of East Jaffrey, N. H., was wilfully murdered by German enemy agents because of his knowledge of their activities in this region, call upon the authorities of the State of New Hampshire to thoroughly investigate all the old and new evidence in the case with a view to thoroughly avenging the murder. We feel that while we were wearing the uniform of our country Dr. Dean met his death while doing an equal service to his flag in attempting to reveal the German spy system to the agents of our government. We strongly urge that the case be persistently probed until the guilty are brought to justice."

Next day, Dr. F. C. Sweeney and Homer J. Deschenes are reported to have objected to this form of petition. They had been the chief opponents of the resolution at the earlier meeting and they have been in sympathy for months with those who have opposed further investigation of the Dean case.

MORE OBJECTIONS MADE.

Sweeney is reported to have been much incensed over the resolutions. At the meeting, Carrol G. Crouch was declared out of order when he attempted to discuss the Dean case. Following him, Sweeney took the floor and denounced the Selectmen and all others who have been honestly trying to solve the Dean case. Deschenes did not interrupt him in his tirade. Glenn Hunt interrupted Sweeney, however, and pointed out that, if Crouch was out of order, Sweeney certainly was. But Hunt was ignored by the chair.

Sweeney replied that Crouch did not understand the resolutions, whereupon Glenn Hunt came back at him with the remark: "I guess I understand the English language as well as Dr. Sweeney."

Deschenes and Hildreth and Sweeney are alleged to have been the chief agents in revising the petition which Hildreth drew up. They dropped the name of the post and substituted the words, "ex-service men of the World War." They also dropped allusions to Dr. Dean's loyalty and patriotism.

Among those who claim that the petition bearing the post name should have gone through without revision, are Levi Serois, who was cited five times for gallantry in action while fighting with the 103d Machine Gun Battalion of the 26th Division; Sergeant Martin J. Kidder, who was in every battle with the 103d Machine Gun Battalion; Frank Hammiston, Frederick B. Pierce, Alcide Pelletier, Phillip Taylor, Meddie J. Taylor, D. Robert Eaves, Glenn Hunt, Frank Pelletier, Anthony Duval, Eugene St. Pierre and others.

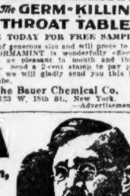
ECZEMA
Also called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Water Poison, Weeping Skin, etc.



DR. CANNADAY
Eczema Specialist for 18 Years.

For fifteen years I have been treating one disease alone, ECZEMA. I have handled over one million cases. I do not pretend to know it all, but I am convinced the disease is due to an excess of acid in the blood, and closely related to rheumatism and cancer. This acid must be removed.

Eczema is called by some people Itch, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Weeping Skin, etc. I am fully convinced Eczema is a curable disease, and when I say it can be cured, I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for a while to return worse than before. It makes no difference what other doctors have told you, or what all you have tried, all I ask is just a chance to prove to you that this vast experience has taught me a great deal that would be of help to you. If you will write me today I will send you a free trial of my mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will do more to convince you than I or anyone else could in a month's preaching. It's all up to you. If you suffer any more with eczema and refuse to merely write to me for free trial, just blame yourself. No matter where you live, I have treated your neighbors. Shaw Reveals Secret of How British Labor Bought Up Press

(Here is a bit of secret history of the labor publicity during the recent British railway strikes. It was divulged by George Bernard Shaw in a speech for a labor candidate when he thought no reporters were present.)

By GEORGE BERNARD SHAW.
Special Cable Dispatch to Universal Service.

London, Jan. 17.—The British Labor Research Department became the publicity department of the railway strike and I knew pretty well how the thing had to be carried on.

The British railway strike took place on a Friday. On the Saturday the whole country was cursing the railway men. Trains were all stopped. Folks were convinced by the newspapers that here were the railway men, who had made a combination practically to extort enormous wages from the community at the expense of the general community. We set to work, and by the following Wednesday the country had been convinced that the government had been engaged in a deliberate attempt to reduce the wages of the railway men.

FORCE GOVERNMENT TO GIVE IN.

In the course of that week we had driven the government from one misstatement to another. Probably the public did not follow the figures so closely as I had to, but day after day we beat them from one positon into another, and the end of it was that they had to give in.

The British transport workers intimated that if the strike was not settled, they would take a part in it next week. Then Mr. Lloyd George crumpled up and the railway strike was won. That is, the first step has been taken.

That sort of thing was not done with nothing. We had to go to Mr. Thomas, secretary of the National Union of Railmen, and say, "Yes, we will do that publicity department, but we want $5,000 a day." Mr. Thomas said, "You will want $10,000 a day."

I said: "We will spend it for you all right."

It was by expenditure on that scale that the press was turned round.

You see it did not belong to us; 90 per cent. of it was in the hands of the railway directors and the class to which they belong. We took care that reporters and newspapers were supplied with all the articles they wanted, and they got paid for it.

The public must have wondered at the highly intelligent speeches made by the labor leaders at the time, and the excellent English of the articles in the papers, when they knew that the leaders were talking all day and speaking all around the country. They must have wondered at the spendid argumentative articles, full of figures, written in splendid literary style.

LABOR SHOWING STRENGTH.

Why am I letting out all these secrets? My real object is to show the way British labor is organizing outside of Parliament.

If we have these organizations of railway workers, transport workers and the rest of them, then if Parliament does not carry out the will of the people they must resort to direct action and take the thing in their own hands. That is the thing before the British public.

Plymouth, Jan. 17.—Several women fainted and a number of other women and children were bruised in the crash which followed when the circuit breaker of a crowded one-man electric car from Kingston blew out with a loud report, filling the car with flame and smoke. CITY HOSPITAL STARTS PROBE OF ANAEMIA

New Blood Laboratory Investigates Disease Which Is Becoming Common

Over at the City Hospital a new blood laboratory has just been started. There a quest has opened to learn something definite about a disease concerning which doctors would like to know more.

The disease is pernicious anaemia, a blood malady. For over half a century now—after its discovery and exact description by Addison in 1855—doctors have tried to determine its exact nature and find a cure, making little progress.

The disease is becoming more common, according to expert opinion. For the purpose of finding out more about this malady, a young doctor works every day in the laboratory at the City Hospital, and will continue to work until some result is obtained. He is in daily consultation with one of the best blood doctors of Boston.

"We don't know what to say yet," they tell you at the blood laboratory. "We don't dare to say we are hunting for a cure. That seems almost too much like bragging. What we are doing is trying to find out something more about the disease—anything.

DISEASE IS FATAL.

"Come back next August; we hope we will have found out something, by then, which will make pernicious anaemia a little less pernicious.

"Don't say we are trying to find out the cause," he begs. "Just say we are trying to investigate this disease from a chemical point of view, in hope that some light will be thrown on some of the mechanism of the production of some of the manifestations of the disease." There you have it—in the young doctor's simple phraseology.

The disease is fatal—that is, pernicious anaemia is fatal. It should never be confounded with ordinary anaemia, which is curable.

The disease attacks all classes, respecting neither rich nor poor. It is confined to no one section of the country.

NEED HEALTHY BLOOD.

One thing the surgeons of the blood laboratory need more than additional instruments is healthy donors of healthy blood. "The whole matter of blood transfusion has been befuddled by the lay notion that to give a small amount of your blood, say a pint, is heroic," explained a well-known blood doctor connected with the new laboratory.

"The giving has been played up as heroism, until I have met mothers who hesitated even to give it to their own babies. As a matter of fact, nothing could be simpler and less dangerous. The blood transfusion process is painless. It takes from two to five minutes to secure a pint. Yet, owing to popular ignorance, we have difficulty in getting donors of blood. Most of the blood used comes from nurses and doctors who are able to go right back to work after the blood is taken.

"The hospital is ready to pay $25 a pint. Anyone wishing to earn $25 easily and perfectly harmlessly should present himself at the office. After his blood has been tested and its health ascertained, he will receive his fee, so soon as the blood is given. Such donations are very necessary in saving life, in conducting discoveries, for all sorts of tests. And no heroism is involved, lay opinion to the contrary."

GENERAL WOOD WILL SPEAK HERE SUNDAY

General Leonard Wood will speak before Back Bay Post No. 117, American Legion, Sunday, at the Old South Meeting House, at 11 a. m., the meeting being open to the public. General Wood will arrive in Boston at 8:30 a. m. from Providence, where he is speaking this evening before the Rhode Island Chamber of Commerce as the official guest of Governor Beeckman. He will be the guest overnight of Bishop Perry of that State. Before making his address here tomorrow he will attend divine service, and after the address will be guest of honor at a reception at the Algonquin Club from 12:30 until 2 p. m. and will then, with Mayor Peters, inspect the Metropolitan Park system on horseback.

JOHN J. KENNEY GAINS IN ILLNESS

The condition of John J. Kenney, who handled newspaper publicity for Governor Coolidge duging his recent campaign for re-election, is reported much improved by physicians at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital. It is expected that his name will be removed from the "danger list" soon. He has been at the hospital for more than two weeks suffering from a complication of bronchitis, pleurisy and pneumonia. Mr. Kenney is employed at the State House, is a widely-known Elk, and formerly worked on several Boston newspapers.

MERRIMAC DWELLING DESTROYED BY FIRE

Merrimac, Jan. 17.—The one and one-half story house occupied by Melvin Webster and family, West Main street, and owned by Charles I. Bickum of this city, was gutted by fire. Mrs. Webster and four small children, alone in the house, escaped to the street. All furnishings were destroyed and the loss will amount to about $4,000. The Merrimac fire department could not cope with flames.

FRANKLIN SQUARE DRIVE PROGRESSES

The first 2,000 of a batch of 10,000 letters to friends of the Franklin Square House has been sent out in the campaign to raise $140,000 for lifting the mortgage indebtedness of the house. Contributions already exceed $13,000, with many coming from the host of young women including the girls at the house who are at work getting subscriptions.

"Bond Bread has made good"

Well known local women, headed by Miss Claribel Nye, bread specialist of Cornell University, selected the prize loaves.

The verdict of local women

TODAY is Bond Bread's birthday. And such a birthday party never has been seen in Boston. When, with the help of local housewives, we perfected Bond Bread one year ago—when those women baked loaves of bread in their own ovens and submitted them in our baking contest to show the kind of bread they and their households wanted—there were some skeptics, some who believed that "this was just another loaf of bread." There were others who said "Oh! yes, Bond Bread may be all right for a week or two, but they won't keep the quality up—all baker's bread is alike anyway."

Today, just one year after the birth of Bond Bread, Boston has rendered its overwhelming verdict—

"Bond Bread has made good!"

How have the purity and flavor of Bond Bread been safeguarded?

One year ago, the General Baking Company pledged its Bond that in Bond Bread would be duplicated the best qualities of those home-made loaves.

May people, especially experienced cooks, have marvelled that the quality of Bond Bread has continued so uniform, day in and day out. Here are some of the reasons:

1. Purity of ingredients. You cannot buy flour, sugar, lard, milk or yeast for your own use one whit purer than the ingredients used in Bond Bread.
2. Scientific control of the Bond Bread formula and process. From the time the ingredients first enter the mixing chamber every step in Bond Bread's process is scientifically controlled.

These are the same methods that have kept this Child of the Housewives as pure and sweet and wholesome as the day the process was perfected.

If you have not yet learned how these housewives helped improve the quality of bread, join the Bond Bread army on this first Bond Bread anniversary.

BLUE LAWS FOR THEATRES SOON

Something is due to drop on the drama hereabouts in a few days, according to a little dickybird that reports to this newspaper. It seems that a lot of people objected to getting into other people's bedrooms and pasing at intimate and domestic scenes that are embarrassing.

They also dislike to look at ladies who have neglected to pull on their stockings, and they don't think airy Grecian garments quite enough.

These curious people argue that the fact that she is dancing doesn't excuse a girl from wearing clothes, and while they admit the barrooms are closed, they don't think the first-class theatres a proper refuge for barroom stories.

The Mayor and the local managers and a committee of reformers and purists have arrayed things on, and a list of don'ts are being drawn up at City Hall that will leave nothing to the average musical revue except the drop curtain and the prima donna's pup.

The chief complaint of the reformers was against Anderson's Frivolities and George White's Scandals. Lewis, the comedian in the Frivolities, insulted every lady in the audience. I called attention to his vulgarity in my review of the piece, and his remark could have been curry-combed without doing any harm, but they were not. There was a scene in White's show also that gave the purists something to grasp.

The theatre managers ought to realize that the professional purifiers have no way of justifying their salaries, now that prohibition has gone, except to find things wrong with amusements, and if you add these uplifting influences to the clerical opposition, they can just about play hob with the kind of drama that Broadway is churning out this season.

Where Are My Children?

There is a bed conspicuously displayed in "Too Many Husbands," but even the Rev. Obediah Snoop could not object to its use because it is not used, it's just part of the scenery. However, the S. P. C. C. ought to make a few inquiries at this entertainment as to what disposition is to be made of the heroine's children.

She has two. They are prominently referred to in the first act and one is actually displayed, but in the next act when the lady gets a divorce not the slightest reference is made to the disposal of the offspring.

The manager of the show says that the play ran a season on Broadway without anybody noticing that the kids were forgotten, but in the first night in Boston everybody has been demanding some explanation.

Somerset Maugham, the author, is in China, so what's to be done?

"Moonlight and Honeysuckle."

Ruth Chatterton, who has won the matinee girl and her grandmother not to mention the matinee girl's gentlemen friends, will please in "Daddy Long Legs" and "Come Out of the Kitchen," return to Boston Monday in another comedy suggesting sentiment and sweetness. It is entitled "Moonlight and Honeysuckle."

George Scarborough, who wrote the piece, is the author of "The Bondy Daughter," the Chinese drama in which Leanore Ulric is making one of the season's hits in New York. Henry Miller, who co-starred with Miss Chatterton in "Daddy Long Legs" and "A Marriage of Convenience," is the producer of "Moonlight and Honeysuckle."

Thought He Was Murderer.

In connection with "At 9:45," the Owen Davis melodrama of mystery, marriage and murder which William J. Brady, Ltd., will present at the Plymouth Theatre commencing Monday night, it is fitting to record the success of a unique experiment made in connection with the rehearsals of this engrossing mystery play. John Cromwell, who in addition to staging "At 9:45," gives excellent account of himself as Captain Dixon, the chief sleuth, decided when he started the rehearsals to project himself so before it came their turn to mystify future audiences. With that idea in mind, Mr. Cromwell during the rehearsal period was careful not to disclose to anyone nor to rehearse until the last moment the scene at the end of the play in which is dramatically disclosed who shot Howard Clayton.

The result of this mystification of the actors is that when presenting the Davis play was in some instances amusing. George Backus, for example, who plays the father of the boy who was shot, was quite positive that he did the deed. And those who saw "At 9:45" during its six months run in New York know that Mr. Backus is one of the few not even remotely suspected of the crime.

The Industrious Mr. West

While Roland West, author of "The Unknown Purple" was taking a vacation down south he wrote a new play, filmed three motion pictures and bought a new theatre New York. When he wearies he does lots more. Yesterday he came to Boston to look over his property at the Majestic. West took a party of guests on a yachting cruise and while aboard made them work for their grub by posing in pictures. That is the rumor along the Tremont Street inflation of the Rialto.

Marie's Bear Skin.

Little Marie Callahan, the four-foot dancer in "The Canary," has played Boston before but nobody saw her face. During the long run of "Chin Chin" she played one of the little bears whose antics in the toyshop scene were so amusing. The bruin costume hid her completely.

A Roxbury Boy.

John Philbrick, the plump comedian of "Tumble In," is a product of Roxbury. He graduated from the Roxbury High School in 1906 and served time at the Castle Square Theatre. He trained with Hap Ward, on the stage, not at Pernessett, with "Oh, Uncle Dolphine" and "Buster Brown" is the last piece he did not play the title role.

This Opera Pays.

The only reason that the opera company at the Arlington is going away in a fortnight is that John Craig insists upon reclaiming his theatre for his very elaborate production of "The Outrageous Mrs. Palmer," in which Mary Young is starred, and for which he expects a long run.

Manager Heck has found Boston more favorably disposed towards opera than any company which has brought the old favorites here for many years, and he is already proposing a long season here next year.

Heck is sure that the fact that his people sing in English is responsible for the prosperity, and very likely he is right. Just now every English opera manager is handicapped by the fact that he can't get first class singers for roles in English, and English companies cannot always offer such good performances as if they were singing in Italian.

But the demand will induce a supply, and in another year or two the number of first-class people ready to use the vernacular in operatic roles will be greatly increased.

Craig Comes Back.

"The Outrageous Mrs. Palmer" was produced for a couple of performances only just before the English opera invaded the Arlington. The leading role offers an emotional actress such a great opportunity that Mr. Craig was besieged with offers for the play, which was written by a young Englishman named Harry Gribble, who was Craig's stage manager. He was determined that Mary Young (Mrs. Craig) should have the big chance and turned them all down.

Spirit Rapping.

Those spiritualists may have special information regarding the other world, but if they want to get along in this one they have to learn to keep their engagements. Masterlinck, the Belgian mystic, didn't show up for his lecture Wednesday night at Symphony, and Sir Oliver Lodge failed to appear the next night. They got all the "rapping" they could have desired from the disappointed audiences.

Likes 'Em From the South.

Clyde McArdle, who manages the Somerville Theatre and who is known to fame as the producer of two dramas by a critic named Crosby, has discovered another girl stock company. He says they have a charm and magnetism that the cold Northerners do not possess. Audrey Baird, the new leading lady of the Somerville company, hails from Kentucky, has brown eyes, very black lady, and her middle name is charm.

Lucia di Lammermoor

is an opera of world wide fame. Nothing can be said to increase its popularity. Some part of the charm of Lucy two highly popular coloratura sopranos have been secured. They are Mme Maria Sidra of the Boston Opera Company, and they will alternate in the role throughout the week. The part of Edgar will be sung by Joseph Sheehan and Leonard Stanford.

HOLLIS ST. THEATRE

The three acts of "Moonlight and Honeysuckle" are laid in the home of Senator Baldwin of Arizona, in Washington, D. C. It is a stately colonial home overlooking the Potomac River. All of the action takes place during a balmy May evening, amid the languorous odors of the honeysuckle.

Mr. Miller has surrounded Miss Chatterton with a notably fine company, including James Rennie, Aurial Lee, Edward Fielding, Sydney Booth, Charles Trowbridge, Katherine Emmet, Lawrence Eddinger and Flora Sheffield.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE

The musical-comedy-wearied theatre goers may do well to "stop, look and listen" to the advance announcement in the interest of William A. Brady's latest, and truly one of his most successful melodramatic productions—"At 9:45"—which will be the Plymouth Theatre offering starting Monday night.

"At 9:45" has had a successful run of eight months at Mr. Brady's Playhouse in New York and is heralded as a regular Brady melodramatic triumph. In the cast will be found Marie Goff, John Cromwell, Edith Shayne, Kenneth MacKenna, Marion Berry and other well-known players who originated their characters in the New York premiere of the play.

This latest Brady thriller is by Owen Davis who also wrote "Forever After" in which Mr. Brady's daughter, Alice Brady, has made her greatest success. "At 9:45" starts, we are told by many who have seen it, with a genuine thrill.

KEITH'S THEATRE

At Keith's Theatre next week there will be two co-headliners. Victor Moore, Emma Littlefield and their company and Valerie Bergere and her company. The latter will be seen in "The Moth," a comedy drama by Edward Peple, in four scenes. Victor Moore returns from musical comedy at the photo-play to vaudeville with Emma Littlefield and a clever company in a sketch which is a screamer entitled "Change Your Act or Back to the Woods."

Miss Juliet will be seen in a fascinating act in which she does a "One Girl Revue" of her own creation assisted by Earnest S. Golden.

MALDEN AUDITORIUM

"Roads of Destiny" is announced as the attraction to be offered by the Temple Stock Company at their Malden Auditorium playhouse. This play of Broadway acclaim comes from the prolific pen of Channing Pollock, whose late success, "The Crowded Hour," was offered earlier in the season by the Temple players, and delves deep into every walk of life.

GAYETY THEATRE

An attraction that is finding great favor with patrons of burlesque this season is Barney Gerard's "Girls He Looks," which was a big hit here last season, and comes to the Gayety Theatre beginning with a matinee on Monday afternoon next. It also marks the return to this field of amusement of Boston well known comedians, Joe K. Watson and Will H. Cohan, who have been headliners in all of the vaudeville houses from coast to coast.

Mr. Gerard has written a book in which the principal parts are peculiarly adapted to the talents of Watson and Cohan in the characters of Slim and Hotkin, two men with a penchant for "Get Rich Quick."

"SHE'S A GOOD FELLOW"

Charles Dillingham's smartest and sprightliest musical comedy, "She's a Good Fellow," which fairly took New York by storm, is to be the attraction at the Colonial Theatre beginning Monday night, January 26.

Musically speaking, it is said to excel anything that Jerome Kern has given us previously, surpassing in invention and fancy the scores of "Oh, Boy," "Oh, Lady, Lady!" and many other delights.

WALDRON'S CASINO

The Reeves show, without a doubt the one distinctly different show on the Columbia Circuit, comes to Waldron's Casino on Monday. It has come to the time when the producers of burlesque shows have to reach a standard and Mr. Reeves has excelled all past records in making this a show of wonders.

GEORGE ARLISS

The attraction at the Hollis Street Theatre beginning Monday, February 2, will be George Arliss in his new play, "Jacques Duval."

SOMERVILLE THEATRE

"Business Before Pleasure" is announced as the captivating comedy attraction for the coming week at the Somerville Theatre and in the hands of the capable Somerville players, with an augmented cast, it is sure to please even the most fastidious and critical.

STRANSKY COMING

For the first time in four years the New York Philharmonic Orchestra will visit Boston. The concert will occur on Tuesday evening, February 17, at Symphony Hall. Stransky, the Bohemian conductor of the Philharmonic, has now wielded the baton over the oldest symphony organization in America for eight years. He is planning to include in his Boston program several great works which have not been heard in this city since the departure of Dr. Muck. The full strength of the Philharmonic is ninety men, but Stransky will bring seven additional players who are needed in one of the works he has included in his program, which will soon be announced.

"TEA FOR THREE"

"Tea for Three" presenting the angle on the triangle, rather than the proverbial angle of the triangle, will open its Boston engagement at Selwyns' Park Square Theatre, on Monday evening, January 26th. This pretentious and humorous comedy, with an intensely dramatic story underlining the whole play, came from the prolific pen of Rod Cooper Megrue.

HOLMES IN ALSACE-LORRAINE

Alsace-Lorraine will prove a new and comparatively unexplored field for the American tourist. Burton Holmes will take his patrons to this land of loveliness in his next travelogue in this city. Strassburg and Metz, Colmar and Schlucht, the Rhine and the Vosges Mountains, the castles and the humble homes, the fruitful gardens and the scenes of devastation, these and the people of Alsace-Lorraine will greet you from his screen this coming week.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SYMPHONY CONCERT

The full Boston Symphony Orchestra, under its regular conductor, Pierre Monteux, will launch a new project by giving a special concert for "Young People" on Thursday, January 29, at four o'clock in the afternoon that it may not conflict with school hours.

MODERN AND BEACON

Next week will bring to the Modern and Beacon the latest release of Douglas McLean and Doris May, "What's Your Husband Doing?" and a Paramount-Artcraft special production, "The Tree of Knowledge." A Mack Sennett comedy and a travel picture completes the program.

"What's Your Husband Doing?" is the screen adaptation of George V. Hobart's stage farce of the same name. "The Tree of Knowledge" is a Paramount-Artcraft special release featuring Robert Warwick, and is adapted from H. C. Carton's play of the same name which had such a remarkable run in London when it was first produced there. "The Tree of Knowledge" is the story of a woman who rules a good man.

BOSTON THEATRE

At the Boston Theatre next week Eric Strohelm's wonder play "Blind Youth," will be seen on the screen for the first time.

LOEW'S ORPHEUM THEATRE

Patrons of Loew's Orpheum Theatre will revel in a program replete with laughter, songs and patter during the coming week. For the first three days Jack Rose, in "Only a Mother's Son," will give Orpheum patrons a treat of their lifetime. His chief accomplice, James Steiger, will entertain at the piano. Hugh Emmett & Co. will offer an artistic variety sketch, "A Quiet Evening at Home." Others on the vaudeville program will be: Wells, Virginia & West, in a snappy pot pourri of songs, steps and stories; Nallen and Goss, in "Versatility a la Carte"; Sue Creighton and Mme. Wenzers and Edwards, Tumbler of 1919," in catchy tunes, style, steps and syncopation, and Olive Harding in oddities of juggling.

PARK THEATRE

Next week will be the last opportunity Boston will have to witness the film version of Gaston Leroux' famous detective story, "The Mystery of the Yellow Room," which is now showing at the Park Theatre. This remarkable picture is, without a doubt, the finest detective film ever made.

WALDORF THEATRE

Emmett Dalton's latest picture, "Beyond the Law," showing the work of the once notorious Dalton gang, when Western outlawry was at its height, will be the screen feature this week at the Waldorf Theatre. It is a Wild-West picture with a moral lesson in which Dalton himself plays one of the principal roles.

The Dalton gang terrorized the Southwest for several years until, on Oct. 5, 1892, two of the brothers were slain in a battle with a posse at Coffeyville, Kansas, after the gang had looted two banks.

Dalton has aimed to make "Beyond the Law" a melodrama with a moral lesson; also a romantic picture depicting the elevating influence of a good girl. The role of the heroine is played by pretty Virginia Lee, one of the Southern Feature Film Corporation stars.

LOEW'S GLOBE THEATRE

Fortune will favor the patrons of Loew's Globe Theatre, Washington street, near Boylston, the first three days of the coming week in that Lew Cody, the superlative Robertson-Cole star, will be shown in his great big love picture, "The Beloved Cheater." Mr. Cody enacts the role of the master love-maker, who has all of the so-called "deadlier sex" wound about his little finger.

CENTRAL SQ. THEATRE

Of extraordinary interest, not only to lovers of the motion picture, but likewise to all who appreciate the highest in art in its various manifestations, is the announcement of Gordon's Cambridge Central Square Theatre that it has secured David Wark Griffith's superb screen creation, "Broken Blossoms," to be shown Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

UPHAM'S CORNER STRAND

After playing recently in Boston to crowded houses at dollar prices, D. W. Griffith's masterpiece, "Broken Blossoms," is to be shown next week at the Upham's Corner Strand, with regular prices prevailing. J. Warren Kerrigan appears on the same program in "The Lord Loves the Irish." Organ recitals by Harry Rodgers, the Strand News Weekly and a new comedy complete the bill.

LOEW'S COLUMBIA THEATRE

Popular film stars and high class vaudeville will comprise the progress for the coming week at Loew's Columbia Theatre. Wanda Hawley and Motts streets. Harry Carey in "Rider of the Law" and Rosalie Love in "Pegeen" will be offered on Monday.

CODMAN SQ. THEATRE

Clara Kimball Young in "Eyes of Youth," the gigantic metro success of the age, has been secured by the management of the Codman Square Theatre, Dorchester, for the first screenings in Dorchester.

McISAAC says that

"THREE FACES EAST," the drama of mystery and spies, with its fine cast headed by Violet Hemming, continues to pull big audiences to the Tremont.

"TOO MANY HUSBANDS," Maugham's funny and brilliantly performed farce, continues at the Wilbur.

"PETTY BE GOOD," the dainty little musical comedy at the Shubert, can remain only one week longer.

"THE UNKNOWN PURPLE," a melodrama of uncanny features and weird thrills, remains at the Majestic.

"TUMBLE IN," the musical comedy based on "Seven Days," has only another week in Boston. It is at the Park Square.

"THE CANARY," with Cawthorn and Julia Sanderson, offers these two stars in a better vehicle than they have had for several seasons. Colonial.

MIRACLE MAN AGAIN IN BOSTON

Published originally as a novel in Munsey's Magazine, written by Frank L. Packard and later dramatized by George M. Cohan and presented with phenomenal success on Broadway, "The Miracle Man" comes to the Scollay Square Olympia next week. As a motion picture this absorbing story has been hailed by the critics as one of the finest productions ever seen on the screen. With scenes laid in the haunts of criminals in New York's Chinatown, in a little village on the side of a giant mountain and on the shore of a roaring ocean, the opportunity for wonderful photographic effects has been realized to the limit.

Glad Folks

In order to pick the right cast for "Pollyanna," her first United Artists' picture, now playing at Tremont Temple, Mary Pickford had to get folks who believed in the now famous "glad" philosophy. And as every motion picture studio presents many glooms, this was somewhat of a task. However, she succeeded.

Frances Marion, of sunny temperament and happy mind, was chosen to make the screen adaptation of Mrs. Eleanor H. Porter's novel of the "glad girl," and she was chosen just because of that temperament and mind. Paul Powell was chosen to direct the piece for the same qualifications, which were also possessed by that most patient and painstaking of cameramen, Charles Rosher.

William Courtleigh, not only famous as an actor but as a gladsome thespian, was chosen to play the hero to Miss Pickford's heroine.

About a Minute

"Now, boys, and men, too, for that matter, if you really and truly loved a girl and asked her to marry you, and she said "Yes," with the condition that you would never, never attempt to kiss her, would you give your consent to such an arrangement?

"And if you did, how long would you live up to that agreement?"

In the latest Robertson-Cole feature starring Lew Cody, "The Beloved Cheater," this very same predicament arises. Kingdon Challoner, the unlucky fellow who has agreed to the betrothal under such conditions, is at his wit's end to know just what to do, for he feels that he can no longer resist the temptation to kiss her cherry red lips and caress her beautiful face.

Hard Climb

Lorin Raker, who portrays the role of the newspaper man in "The Mystery of the Yellow Room," which is now playing at the Park Theatre, has had a remarkable career of difficulties overcome and of responsibilities achieved.

After graduating from high school Mr. Raker attended college at Wichita, Kansas, and while there became a member of the all-star stock company at Wichita, establishing a reputation as a juvenile lead. During his third year in college a fire burned out the stock company and destroyed all of Raker's personal belongings. He then went to New York, where he was cast by Louis Mann in "Children of Today," and after the run of this play went into pictures at Fort Lee.

Couple o' Nuts.

Doris May and Douglas McLean, recent acquisitions to the ranks of motion picture stars, are "the life of the party" out at the big Ince studio these tumultuous days. Miss May is only seventeen years old, and Mr. McLean is a youth in his early twenties. Happiness is their middle name. They fairly radiate the joy of life and oldtimers on the Ince lot say their presence has added a youthful bringing injection of Dr. Voronoff's famous "monkey serum."

Mr. McLean insisted upon his dressing room being papered with a bluebird design, whereupon himself and all others between scenes by playing the ukelele and singing popular airs in a most jaunty manner. He has once a member of a college glee club and possesses a pleasant voice. Butterflies is a Wild-West picture with a moral lesson in which Dalton himself plays one of the principal roles.

The Dalton gang terrorized the Southwest for several years until, on Oct. 5, 1892, two of the brothers were slain in a battle with a posse at Coffeyville, Kansas, after the gang had looted two banks.

WAGNER MUSIC CHARMS AT SYMPHONY

Mme. Matzenauer an Inspiring Soloist; Stojowski Piece Skillfully Interpreted

By FRED J. McISAAC.

"A good time was enjoyed by all," is the way a village journal might describe yesterday's Symphony concert. There was a symphony by Sigismonde Stojowski, a Pole living in New York, which was quite the most interesting symphonic novelty of the season. There was Margaret Matzenauer, a gorgeous looking person in a purple gown with a voice which compares favorably with the great Wagnerian singers of the past, and there was some wonderfully inspiring Wagner music.

That Stojowski symphony has a scherzo which for brilliancy and originality leaves you almost breathless and a finale which is noble, fine and satisfying. The first two movements are not so meritorious.

They are singing German songs again but in English. Before the war they told us they could not be competently translated. Endless of how many hours I have sat listening to the horrible German language, the worst tongue in which anybody ever tried to sing, and wondering how Engelbert could have melodies which survived such a language.

Well they translate them all right. Matzenauer's translations of Brahms, Schumann and Schubert were made by Krehbiel and they are musical and poetic. Unfortunately Matzenauer's diction leaves lots to be desired. However, she owns a most marvelous voice and her declamation of the fire music from "Dusk of the Gods" was memorable.

Monteux conducted the Wagner music in a remarkable manner. I don't remember a grander climax than he achieved at the end of the immolation music.

GORDON'S OLYMPIA

Mr. Arthur J. Mirrielli, whose wonderful work at the new $50,000 Hope-Jones organ, in Gordon's Olympia has been nothing less than a sensation, will stage an innovation next week by playing on this remarkable instrument all the old Irish melodies.

Playing the fascinating role of a London music hall dancer who finds romance in the heart of India, the superb Nazimova heads the picture program. The Russian star's newest screen vehicle is entitled "Stronger Than Death," and advance accounts of the production describe it as the most ambitious done by Nazimova.

"Stronger Than Death" is a screen adaptation of the brilliant novel by I. A. R. Wylie.

French Girl Musician to Aid Smith College in Solo Program

Miss Madeline Brard.

Miss Madeline Brard, a charming sixteen-year-old French girl who is studying at Smith College, will give a farewell solo program Tuesday evening, January 20, at Jordan Hall in aid of the Smith College $1,000,000 fund.

Miss Brard delighted Boston audiences on her first appearance here at Sanders Theatre with the Symphony Orchestra in their pension Fund Concert. Critics have remarked upon her wonderful success regardless of her age. It is regreitable to the Boston public that they are to lose such a talented young musician but it is hoped that this will not be her last appearance. Miss Brard's appearance is to be under the auspices of the American Association for Musical Art.

SPERRY & HUTCHINSON COMPANY WORKERS DINE

Good cheer and optimism abounded at the dinner of the Sperry & Hutchinson Company at the Westminster. The diners were regaled by a cabaret troupe orchestra, and had the fun of watching a weird performance in which the well-known character, "John Barleycorn" was hurried to the walls of the entire assembly.

Much merriment was caused when a goat belonging to one of the members was brought in. George B. Caldwell, president, delivered the main speech.

SON, ACCUSER OF MOTHER, NOW DEFENDS HER

Makes Second Affidavit, Retracting Charge That She Killed Daughter

By International News Service.

Paw Paw, Mich., Jan. 17.—Michigan's "Hope Chest" murder, which the authorities had considered solved by the affidavit of Walter O. Tabor, accusing his eighty-year-old mother with killing his sister with chloroform, was clouded with complications today.

Attorneys for Mrs. Sarah O. Tabor, the mother of Maude Tabor, gave notice that they would contest to the last the use of her son's affidavit. Tabor made another affidavit to his attorneys denying the truth of the one in which he accused his mother, and asserting that it was obtained from him under false pretences.

"They will have to show there was malice," said Attorney Ketcham for the Tabors today. "There never was one shred of evidence to show that Maude and her mother had any argument. My defense is that Maude died a natural death. For more than a month she had been treated for asthma; her heart action was bad and she was soon to become a mother."

Meanwhile Mrs. Tabor, aged and wrinkled under the weight of her eighty years, remains incommunicado in the jail here. The charge that she murdered her daughter with chloroform and then hid the body in Maude's own "Hope chest," secreting it beneath the cellar floor and concealing it for three years, rests lightly upon her. She reads the current magazines and refuses to discuss the case other than to state her disbelief in her son's accusing affidavit.

"I dominate the jail," she said to a reporter today. "I don't let the jail dominate me. I'm bigger than the jail."

Joseph Virgo, who was the secret husband of Maude Tabor and was charged with causing her death, returned to his home in South Bend today.

CHELSEA BOY BREAKS ARM WHILE COASTING

Isadore Sackman, aged thirteen, living at No. 150 Addison street, Chelsea, was injured while coasting down Carter street. To avoid running into a boy, he turned his sled and crashed into a building at the foot of the street. His arm was broken in two places, and he was severely shaken.

FLAMES WIPE OUT STORES IN VERMONT

Rutland, Vt., Jan. 17.—The business section of the village of Middletown Springs, fifteen miles from here, was practically destroyed by fire today. The blaze, which started from a short circuited wire in the telephone office, swept through the community, wiping out a number of buildings, including the hotel, town hall and a private residence.

The loss isestimated at between $150,000 and $175,000. The lack of proper fire fighting apparatus made attempts to save business structures futile.

At the time the fire started the telephone office was untenanted and locked up, which permitted the blaze to attain tremendous headway before it was discovered.

Aided by a strong wind, the flames leaped up through the telephone building, and then sprang to Carpenter's drug store nearby. The fire made short work of these two buildings, which were destroyed before the majority of the villagers had been aroused.

Guests of Kelly's Hotel were warned in time, however, and reached the street before the blaze seized the structure. The antiquated hand-tubs of the volunteer fire department had no effect in stemming the torrent of flames, which spread to the hotel stables, and the Gray residence.

Attempts were made to save the Town Hall, but without success, and the Community House, recently refitted, was also consumed. A change of wind saved the postoffice from destruction. The village has less than 1,000 inhabitants.

The column will halt at the head of the centre aisle, open ranks and Lieutenant-Governor Cox will pass through and be received at the chancel by the rector. A patriotic service will be held.

Dr. Alexander Mann will preach on "Personal Religion" at a group meeting of all the Newton parishes and Watertown, Wellesley and Needham, to be held Tuesday evening at 8 in Trinity Church, Newton Centre, in connection with the "Call of the Church."

SUGGESTS MILL BUY CAR TICKETS FOR HELP

Lawrence, Jan. 17.—Alderman Robert S. Maloney of this city, has suggested to the Lawrence mill corporation that they purchase car tickets from the Eastern Street Railway at sixteen rides for $1 and sell the tickets back to their help at five cents per ticket giving the employe a chance to save one and one quarter cents on a ride. He believes that the mill corporations would benefit indirectly by the action and cites the fact that it would be the first step in the direction of the proposed reduction in street car fares here.

YALE HAS EDGE ON HARVARD

Blue Sextet Confident They Will Defeat Crimson in Game at Pavilion

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Yale expects to start a winning year against Harvard at the Ice Pavilion this evening.

These ancient rivals meet for the first time in 1920 in the opening match of the Harvard-Yale-Princeton hockey series, and an Eli victory will be hailed as an omen for Yale successes, in track, crew, baseball and football before the year 1921 puts in an appearance.

This year, for the first time in Harvard-Yale hockey history, the men from New Haven seem to enjoy a slight edge over Crimson stickers. This edge may be offset by Harvard's experience at playing in the local rink, but it nevertheless produces a comfortable feeling in the hearts of Eli sympathizers.

The Yale sextet is made up largely of seasoned material. Captain Dave Ingalls, who, by the way, was the only naval aviator to play, seems set to win recognition as an ace, is one of the most skilful players ever to represent the Blue. "Red" Martin, the Eli coverpoint, who served for a time with the old Arena Hockey Club team, is a remarkable defensive player, and one who specializes in nabbing the puck from an opponent and carrying it the length of the rink for a score, while both Lawrence and Carson, the Yale wings, are stickarers of proven ability.

With virtually no opportunity to practice, the Blue assembled in Canada during the Christmas vacation, engaging in six games with leading Canadian outfits, and in spite their lack of seasoning, registered two victories and forced the remaining opponents to travel at topmost speed to secure small-margined victories.

* * *

There is still some question in the minds of those who witness the Pavilion double-header as to whether the Yankee Division team was giving an exhibition of going over the top, or a demonstration of how well its hockey men knew football. The team's exhibition proved to be anything but hockey, but for the kind hearts of Bunnie Holden, Dartmouth Club goal, and Leon Tuck, Dartmouth Club captain, the score would have stood 7 to 1 instead of 7 to 3 against the Yli team.

Bunnie Holden, who seemed to surprise himself as well as the spectators by a really fine exhibition of goal guarding, became a bit excited after he had checked one Y. P. shot, and knocked the puck into his own goal. Leon Tuck's kindness to the veterans came when he allowed T. Wilbur Watson, the referee, to establish a truly quaint precedent in handling a game.

The incident occurred in the second period. Healy, a Y. M. C. U. player, deliberately slashed Murphy of the Dartmouth Club, and while Referee Watson skated toward Healy to order him from the ice, Healy secured the puck, raced up the ice and shot a goal. The referee ruled the goal should stand, but put Healy out of the game for the foul which directly led to the goal. Leon Tuck, with a laugh, allowed the ruling to stand.

Tuck and Johnnie Murphy displayed rare form during the contest, despite the fact that Bill Howe and Harried desperately to make a rough house match of it. "Brainy" Bower, who substituted for Mason at a wing position for the tireless, "cork 'em" skin-hand issue with Howe during the second half, and sent the form of Yale football star sprawling several times.

* * *

The second game of the double-header, with Boston University substituting for Tech in the match with the Massachusetts Aggies, closely approached a burlesque, as the 10 to 2 score in the Aggies' favor would indicate.

The Aggie team, except for its defensive trio, proved an impressive array, and but for the selve-like goal guarding of Peckham would have been forced to the limit to win from the inexperienced B. U. array. Those of the latter team who knew how to shoot could not know how to handle their sticks, while those that knew what their sticks were meant for seemed uncertain of what to do with their skates. Mutty, of B. U., who after some teasing found he could keep his feet by running on his skates, brought the house to its feet, when he ran straight down the ice and poked the puck through Delehunt, the Aggie goal tender.

* * *

A new hockey star, fresh from Halifax, may be found in the B. A. A. lineup when that team next performs. He is J. R. Harley, former Dalhousie College player and at present attending the Harvard Law School. He has been recommended to the B. A. A. by Doc Tingley, the former Arena hockey official, and is working out for a defence position with the Unicorn squad.

BOSTON REFEREE AGREEABLE TO MIKE O'DOWD

By JACK CONWAY

Faddy Mullins, manager of Mike O'Dowd, has notified the Armory Club that he will not object to a Boston man refereeing the twelve-round bout between the middleweight champion and Stockyards Tommy Murphy at Mechanics Building next Tuesday night.

Mullins has set a precedent for our American champion. The average little holder wants to name his own referee and the other conditions under which the match is held.

O'Dowd, however, has often declared that he would not be disqualified for the championship if he was not sure he could beat every man of his weight in the country. It was only natural that he should agree to accept any capable Boston man as referee. The chances are that Larry Conley will be the selection.

Murphy feels confident he will give O'Dowd the battle of his career. The Chicago middleweight has already engaged in one torrid ten-round mix-up with the champion, while he has also swapped punches with Jamaica Kid and some of the other big fellows.

Willie Corbett of Somerville and Dan McCormack, East Boston boxer, have been signed to meet in the semi-final of ten rounds at the Hollyfolk A. A.'s show at Hibernian Hall, Roxbury, next Monday night. The boys will weigh in at 128 pounds. There is considerable rivalry between the followers of the two men and they are sure to turn out in force to witness the tussle.

Frankie Maher of Brooklyn, who meets Johnny Mooney of Newton in the final of twelve rounds, is very likable to stop the winning drive of the local star. Maher is by far the best boxer Mooney has ever met, with the possible exception of Harry (Kid) Brown of Philadelphia. Maher, like Mooney, is a youngster in the ring game. He gets a terrific punch, and if he scores with it Mooney will have a difficult task to prevent himself from passing out of the picture. At Newport six weeks ago Maher stopped George Brown of New York. The latter is one of the best lightweights in the East. He was under the management of Scotty Monteith, who brought Johnny Dundee to the front.

Brown broke with Monteith after the Newport battle. Brown's class is attested by the fact that he didn't experience much trouble in winning over Charley Parker in Philadelphia, and Parker is the man who put Packey Parker down for the count of nine. Any lightweight who can stop Brown need not worry about Mooney's prowess.

Paul Doyle is at Bedford preparing for his twelve-round contest with Louis Bogash of Bridgeport, which will be staged by the Fenway A. A. at Mechanics' Building next Wednesday night. When Doyle and Bogash met at Brockton a couple of months ago, the latter grabbed the decision. All of which means Doyle will have to be at his best to finish in front next Wednesday night.

Al Calzone of Milford is ready for action once more. He has recovered from the injuries he recently received in an auto crash. Calzone will oppose Gus O'Donnell of Brockton in a twelve-round bout at Milford on January 26.

FURS

VISITORS to our unfair city are knocked bowlegged by the sight of all flappers and married ladies packing around expensive furs.

THEY are also struck pink by the sight of married gents wearing coaxly strings of pearls on their foreheads, which prove to be beads of perspiration on a second squint.

WE mention flappers and matrons in one soda pop colored breath, because the married cuckoos are the Quartermaster Department for both.

KNOCK off an ankle excursion up Boylston or Tremont streets and every blonde, brunette and henna you lump is a high-heeled mummy soaked to the ears in fur bandages. No frail considers herself official unless she is dolled up like a hatrack in a boarding house with all the boarders home. Adam never had to worry about any soprano haberdashery bills. His wife went around bald. But times have changed since the two prohibitionists got aboard the ark disguised as water bugs.

THE old-fashioned spendthriftess who put all her worldly goods on her back must have presented a wonderful view from the front. She always tried to outshine the woman next door. She now has a daughter whose idea of a rival is the wax lady in the plate glass window. Trying to outdress department store wax works is like trying to outshimmy a guy with the malaria. No wonder her husband is so round-shouldered that he can look into an ash barrel without bending his neck.

FURS are busting up a lot of happy stucco bungalows with garages attached. One sealskin coat starting in the end cottage will spread throughout the entire row like flies in huckleberry time.

WHILE hubby is down in the cellar figuring the right way to drink wood alcohol, the wiff is downtown with a bankroll that belongs a block further east or west. She trades the B. R. for a genuine seal coat that used to meow when it was alive and walk fencetops like Blondin. Five hundred smackers for a near-bear fur coat with rent day coming on and landlords packing hearts as soft as the yolk of a doorknob.

ANYTHING makes a fur coat these days. Hunters used to trap furs, but now they sweep out barber shop floors or lasso wild hair-stuffed sofas of the 1870 period, when sofas were a mile long, engaged couples supersti-tious and fever blisters were supposed to be contagious.

THERE seems to be anything in a fur coat but fur. But the manufacturers are honest. They call a coat Mexican whimpie and then explain that Mexican whimpie is imitation measle fur with two relapses and dandruff trimmings. That is writing a letter and calling yourself a liar in the postscript.

NO deception. No three sheiks and one little marble. Only one sheil and that's out. When they sell you a genuine Hudskin seal coatee, they tell you that Hudskin seal is Persian noodles mixed with shredded lamp wicks with a blotting paper filler. And a coarse lam's coat. It's only the collar, but it will grow into a coat if it sheds in the right direction. Every time the wife brushes it she puts the combings into a cigar box with her switches. After three brushings she takes the combings back to the store and has 'em made into a Molesknunk dolman, which is a sort of empty potato sack with enough buttons on it to fill it.

ALASKA butterskin is another favorite skin disease with the fashionable frails. This Woojee Board fur is plain oleomargarine skin which looks well at the first glance. Unfortunately, Boston is an occult village in which the plebiscite of inhabitants is gifted with second sight.

AFRICA beaverette is made of the coat and vest of a Kentucky mule or of the pelt of the Swiss bimbo, a wood-eating insect which preys on the eggs of carved cuckoos. Any fur is all right for fur coats, provided that its name means something else. But the girls are happy, why worry yourself into three or four aspirin tablets?

EVERYBODY'S prosperous, especially the Gypsies who used to trade mules and ride around in wagons. Now they skin the mules and ride around in stem-winding limousines.

K. O. RECORD OF K. O. MUGGSY GETS JOLT

Johnny McMenimen ruined the great Muggsy's knockout record by taking along the champion flattener for twelve torrid rounds at the Commercial show. Muggsy got the verdict at the finish, but he didn't have a whole lot on his opponent, who made a decided hit with the customary K. O. crowd.

The mill was a surprise to the gathering, as both boys tried boxing rather than pile-driving tactics for nine lively rounds. There were a flock of solid thumps by both parties, but no real bone crushers. In the tenth, however, Muggsy rushed out from his corner and socked McMenimen on the chin before that young man had his guard up.

Johnny flopped to the mat, which he did three more times in the same chapter, but he weathered the storm. He had a bad time in the eleventh, taking a lot of nasty cracks, but the bell clanged in time to save him. McMenimen came back strong in the finale and dropped Muggsy with a straight left to the chin.

But Muggsy had four knockdowns to one, so brought home the winning end. In the prelims, Barney McAtee dropped Frank Sullivan in the second, while Coogan beat George Reynolds in six rounds, and Willie Green had the better of Frank Hanlon in eight stanzas.

"NO CONTEST," SAYS REFEREE AT BROCKTON

Referee Jerry Lynch declared the bout between Joe Connolly of Charlestown and Shaver O'Brien of South Boston no contest when O'Brien fouled the Charlestown boxer in the seventh round at the Farrington A. SENIORS WINNERS OF SOUTH BOSTON MEET

Coach Joe Green uncovered some fine track and field material over at South Boston High School when an interclass meet was held. The senior seven with a total of 23 points the sophomores with 23 were second, the freshmen third with 15, and the juniors last with 11 points.

Tibbetts won the 600. He holds the district high school mark for intermediate record for the distance. The 1000-yard run went to Welch, who raced the entire distance at top speed.

FRANK TILLO WINS FROM MIKE FITZSIMMONS

Marlboro, Jan. 17.—Frank Tillo of Boston defeated Mike Fitzsimmons of Yonkers in a ten-round bout at the Driving Club tonight. Joe Farren of Boston won from Eddie Carter of Worcester in six rounds; Nap Boutillier of Millis knocked out Joe Dion of New Bedford in one round and Johnny Mack of New Bedford was awarded a decision in six rounds over Young Leonard of Chelsea.

B. U. FRESHMAN FIVE BEATS JUNIOR TEAM

Freshmen of the College of Liberal Arts proved their agility against the junior men's five at Boston University when they won a fast basketball game, 20 to 16. The 1923 team got its lead in the first half, and held its own because of better passing and team play. Jackson, right forward for the freshmen, starred, Bailey making the most points for the juniors.

IRA THOMAS TO COACH WILLIAMS NINE AGAIN

Williamstown, Jan. 17.—Ira Thomas, formerly catcher for the Athletics, will coach the Williams baseball nine again this Spring. It will be his fourth season with the Purple. He is expected to arrive early next month when candidates will be called out for indoor work in the cage. Thomas is said to have a five-year contract with the Purple, his services having been obtained by the Williams alumni who became disgusted by the poor showing made by the Williams nine a few years ago. Thus far Thomas has brought the Purple back to the place held among the Eastern colleges a decade ago, but he has been handicapped by poor material.

SUNDAY BALL FOR MAJOR LEAGUES

Fullerton Hopeful of Having Bills Passed to Allow Sports on Sabbath

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Every major league baseball club in both National and American circuit may play Sunday baseball during the next season. The movement to get laws permitting baseball to be played on Sunday is actively under way in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Boston and, in the case of the Pennsylvania cities, it is reported to have an excellent chance of success. Oddly enough in Philadelphia, which is popularly supposed to be the last stand in favor of the strict Sunday observance, there appears to be a big sentiment in favor of permitting baseball to be played.

Connie Mack has been actively engaged in trying to secure votes enough to put through a Sunday baseball bill, and it is said much success has attended his campaign.

In Pittsburgh the campaign has been carried on more quietly and the difficulty appears to be the fact that the park is located near a strictly residential district.

There is a large sentiment among the working, and especially the steel industry, classes for Sunday baseball.

BIG BOOST FOR GAME.

The success of the experiment since the introduction of Sunday ball in New York and Brooklyn,, and the good results in the way of law and order, have encouraged the owners in other cities to hope for either State or local laws permitting the sport.

In Philadelphia, during the war, service teams were permitted to play on Sunday, but even that permission brought a PWOW. The changed character of the population because of the tremendous shipyard activities seems to have aroused many of the authorities to the belief that some form of Sunday amusement is necessary.

If Philadelphia permits Sunday baseball it will be an irresistible boost to both the American and National League clubs, which are not prospering financially, and will afford Connie Mack an opportunity to pull out of the hole.

SUNDAY BALL A GOOD INFLUENCE.

Sunday baseball is a tough problem. In the West, where it has been established for years, it has proved a big force for law and decency.

A number of years ago there was a fight on Sunday ball in Chicago. I made a study of the subject. The fact was, baseball had been acting little or nothing about the effects of the game, and the strongest support for Sunday baseball were the police officials.

They furnished me with Sunday records showing the crimes and arrests committed on Sundays on which big games were played with those of Sundays when the team was away from home, showed a remarkable decrease.

It was plain that, when the boys and young men (the class that commits the largest number of crimes) were attending baseball games they kept out of trouble.

I was aligned at the idea of Sunday baseball in New York. My idea was that, being an innovation, it would lead to a lot of disorder in the crowd and especially the younger tough element.

My idea was that, after the novelty wore off, it would be all right, but that baseball would get a black eye before the thing really was tested.

To my surprise, the Sunday crowds have been the best dressed and most orderly of all attending Polo Grounds games. This fact has been remarked upon by attendants.

Thomas Hickey will serve as president of the league for three more years, and J. A. Norton, of the St. Paul Club, vice-president.

$200,000 for French Champion or No Title Bout

London, Jan. 16.—The promoter who lands the Dempsey-Carpentier fight will have to put up $200,000 for the Frenchman's end alone. This mark was set in a telegram received from Francois Descampa, Carpentier's manager, by Charles Harvey, representing Jim Coffroth, who wants the fight for Tia Juana.

Descampa seems to have caught the high-price infection from the Dempsey camp, and threatens to go even beyond the mark he set in today's telegram to Harvey. He has jumped the price $15,000 inside of a month.

McNEILL, CAPTAIN OF TECH HOCKEY TEAM

Dan McNeill, former Arena hockey star, has been elected captain of the Tech hockey team for this year. McNeill hails from Canada where he played for four years with the St. Paul Junior College team, being captain in the aggregation his last two years in school. He is now a player-center for that team two years ago. Last year he did not play hockey.

ELDER ZBYSZKO COMING HERE NEXT MONTH

Mighty Pole Prepared to Take on Best Wrestlers Now in America

By J. H. HERMAN.

Manager of Stanislaus Zbyszko.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—Who is the world's heavyweight wrestling champion?

Don't crowd or push, gents; there's room for all.

First, there's Earl Caddock, the Anita, Iowa, farmer boy with a strong claim to the title—merely a claim, understand. Then there's Joe Stecher of Sodgo, Neb., who asserts he's the real champion and that Caddock doesn't know what he's talking about. Next in line is Ed "Strangler" Lewis of headlock fame. Lewis is firmly convinced that he should be considered in the championship dispute. Comes now Wladek Zbyszko with a roar to be heard. Then there is Marin Plestina, who insists that nobody will wrestle him. Trailing in rear of the long procession is John Pesek, Ad Santel, Jack Taylor and a score of lesser lights, all claimants of the championship.

READY TO MEET ALL.

But——

There is a bulky person coming to our shores about the middle of February—one Stanislaus Zbyszko—who asserts that Messrs. Caddock, Stecher, Lewis, Plestina et als. are the Professor Portas of the wrestling world—all of them claimants, but none of them entitled to the championship.

When Zbyszko returned to his native Poland four years ago, he left a string of bewildered wrestlers behind him in this country, all of them glad that he had departed. He had defeated, one after the other, them, including virtually all of the present day stars of the mat. He had waded through the entire list, the late Frank Gotch being the only man in the country to upset him.

DECLINED RETURN BOUT.

Gotch, then the undisputed champion, met Zbyszko in their memorable match at the Coliseum in Chicago. Zbyszko advanced to the centre of the ring with a friendly hand extended to Gotch, instead of grasping it as was the custom, dove for the Polish giant's legs and pinned him before he had realized what had happened. Gotch considered himself lucky to get away with the trick. Efforts to get him to meet Zbyszko in a return match were always futile. He refused absolutely to go to the mat with him again, although he was offered $10,000 for the bout.

Zbyszko is acknowledged to be the master wrestler of the day. He is scientific to the highest degree, powerful, tricky and a marvel in physical development. Caddock, Lewis, Stecher et als. may consider themselves as champions, but in their hearts they are willing to concede the Pole's superiority.

READY IN TWO WEEKS.

Zbyszko promises to settle the championship dispute—rather, begin the task of settling it—within two weeks after his arrival in New York. He notified his manager, Jack Herman, to arrange matches at once with Caddock, Stecker, Lewis, Plestina, Pesek, Santel et al. He is anxious to meet them all, with no exception as regards weight, color or affiliation.

Since the termination of the war Zbyszko has engaged in contests to raise funds for the destitute families of Poland and disabled soldiers, and is high on the list of these. He writes that he is in superb condition, and after two weeks of training following his arrival in New York will rip into the crop of championship claimants with a view to establishing his undisputed right to the world's title.

TECH-BROWN SWIMMING MEET IS CALLED OFF

Technology has cancelled their swimming meet with Brown, which was billed for Providence tonight. The Tech management took this step as a result of orders of the faculty that all activities at the school be suspended until after the funeral of President Maclaurin. Manager McKay of the Tech swimming team said that the meet with Brown may be staged some time next week before the Tech meets the University of Pennsylvania here next Saturday night.

THE CINEMA MURDER

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

A Thrilling Mystery Film Serial of Love and Poverty With the Scene Laid in London and New York

"The Cinema Murder" in motion pictures, with Miss Marion Davies as the charming heroine, a Cosmopolitan production, is being shown this week at the Washington and Old South Theatres in Boston and the Olympia in Chelsea. Screened under direction of George D. Baker. Presented by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as a Paramount-Artcraft Picture.

What Has Gone Before

Philip Romilly, a poor London art teacher, calls on the girl he is engaged to at his old home, Detton Magna, and she tells him she is tired of waiting for him to get enough money to marry on, and has promised to wed Douglas, his cousin. She taunts him with his poverty and he leaves the house, walking towards a canal nearby. He takes passage for America as Douglas Romilly. He meets Elizabeth Dalstan, the pretty young movie actress, at his table on board ship. From a story told by Raymond Greene, a movie magnate, he gets the idea he is suspected of being involved in a crime committed near the canal. He tells Elizabeth this, he is an impostor. A wireless message is received telling of the strange disappearance in England of Philip Romilly. He arrives in New York and finds a cablegram saying that Douglas Romilly's wealth is a myth. He assumes the name of Merton Ware.

"OH! my likes and dislikes don't matter," she replied. "It's good stuff. You'll find the account in there. If you'd like to pay me, I'd like to have the money."

"Sit down for a minute," he begged. "I'm stuck this morning—can't write a line. Take my easychair and smoke a cigarette—I have nothing else to offer you."

For a moment she seemed about to refuse. Then she flung herself into his easychair, took a cigarette and, holding it between her lips, almost scarlet against the pallor of her cheeks, stretched upwards towards the match which he was holding.

"Stella and her boy were over to see me last night," she announced, a little abruptly.

"The young lady with the ermines," he murmured.

Trying to Pump

"And her boy, Felix Martin. It was through him they came—I could see that all right. He was trying all the time to pump me about you."

"About me!"

"Oh! you needn't trouble to look surprised," she remarked. "I guess you remember the bee he had in his bonnet that night."

"Mistook me for someone, didn't he?" Philip murmured.

She nodded.

"Kind of queer you don't read our newspapers. It was a guy named Romilly—Douglas Romilly—who disappeared from the Waldorf Hotel. Strange thing about it," she went on, "is that I've seen photographs of him in the newspapers, and I can't recognise even a likeness."

"This boy, Felix Martin doesn't agree with you, apparently," Philip observed.

"He don't go by photographs," Martha Grimes explained. "He believes that he crossed from Liverpool with this Mr. Douglas Romilly, and that you," she continued, crossing her legs and smoothing down her skirt to hide her shabby shoes, "are so much like him that he came down last night to see if there was anything else he could find out from me before he paid a visit to police headquarters."

Reward Useful

There was a moment's silence. Philip was apparently groping for a match, and the girl was keeping her head studiously turned away from him.

"What business is it of his?"

"There was a reward offered. Don't know as that would make much difference to Felix Martin, though. According to Stella's account, he is pretty well a millionaire already."

"It would be more useful to you, wouldn't it?" Philip remarked.

"Five hundred dollars!" Martha sighed. "Don't seem to me just now that there's much in the world you couldn't buy with five hundred dollars."

"Well, what did you tell Mr. Felix Martin?"

"Oh, I lied, sure! He'd found out the game you came into your rooms here—the day this man Romilly disappeared—but I told him that I'd known you and done work for you before then—long enough before the Elitania ever reached New York. That kind of stumped him."

"Why did you do that?" Philip demanded.

"Dunno," the girl replied, with a shrug of the shoulders. "Just a fancy. I guessed you wouldn't want him poking around."

"But supposing I had been Douglas Romilly, you might at least have divided the reward," he reminded her.

"There's money and money," Martha declared. "We spoke of that the other day. Stella's got money—now. Well, she's welcome. My time will come, I suppose, but if I can't have clean money, I haven't made up my mind yet whether I wouldn't rather try the Hudson on a foggy morning."

"Well, I am not Douglas Romilly, anyway," Philip announced.

She looked up at him almost for the first time since her entrance.

"I kind of thought you were," she admitted. "I might have saved my lies, then."

He shook his head.

"You have probably saved me from more than you know of," he replied. "I am not Douglas Romilly, but——"

"You're not Merton Ware, either," she interrupted.

A Little Journey

"Quite right," he agreed. "I started life as Philip Merton Ware the day I took these rooms, and if the time should come," he went on, "that any one seriously set about the task of finding out exactly who I was before I was Merton Ware, you and I might make enough money for my present needs, though—enough, by the by, to pay you for this typing," he added, counting out the money upon the table.

"Any more stuff ready?"

"With luck there'll be some this afternoon," he answered. "I had a bad night last night, but I think I'll be able to work later in the day."

She looked at him curiously, at his face, absolutely devoid of color, his eyes, restless and overbright, his long, twitching fingers.

"Had conscience or drugs?" she asked.

"Bad conscience," he acknowledged. "I've been where you have been—Miss Grimes. I looked over the edge and I jumped. I'd stay where you are, if I were you."

"Maybe I shall, maybe I shan't," she replied doggedly. "Stella wants to bring a boy around to see me. You bring him," I said. 'I'll talk to him.' Then she got a little confused. Stella's kind, in her way, she came back after Mr. Martin had gone down the passage. 'See here, kid,' she said, 'you know as well as I do I can't bring any one round to see you while you are sitting around in those rags. Let me lend you—' Well, I stopped her short at that. 'My own plumes or none at all,' I told her, 'and I'd just as soon he didn't come, anyway.'"

"You're a queer girl," Philip exclaimed. "Where's your father today?"

"Usual place," she answered—"in bed. He never gets up till five."

"Let me order lunch up here for both of us from the restaurant," he suggested.

She shook her head.

"No, thanks!"

"Why not?" he persisted.

"Im going round to the office to see if I can get any extra work."

"But you've got to lunch some time," he persisted.

She laughed a little hardly.

"Have I? We girls haven't got to eat like you men. I'll call up towards the evening and see if you've anything ready for me."

She was gone before he could stop her. He turned back to his desk and seated himself. The sight of his last finished sentence presented itself suddenly in a new light. There was a suggestiveness about it which was almost polgnant. He took up his pen and began to write rapidly.

To Be Continued Monday

The Municipal Leg

In a small town in Scotland the town clerk, who was a bit of a "character," had the misfortune to lose his leg in a railway accident. As a mark of appreciation and esteem for his long services the council unanimously agreed to replace his loss with an artificial limb, which they did as soon as he was sufficiently recovered. A few months afterward the same official, who was generally known by his Christian name, Paul, was unfortunate enough to have his other leg fractured in a trap accident. Naturally the mishap was the subject of much town gossip, and one old wife, in discussing the matter with a neighbor, was overheard to say, "It's a gey bad business for Paul, mair, but is it his ain leg or the leg that belongs to the toon that's broken?"

The Reflections of a Bachelor Girl

A MAN'S kisses may not be so numerous or so ardent as they were in the halcyon days before the "drouth"; but what there is of them is a lot more pleasant and convincing.

The woman-charmer and the masculine "ramp" live upon the starved vanity of all the women whose husbands have forgotten the rules of the love-game.

Of course, every woman wants a man to "understand" her; but, somehow, she would rather have him adore her blindly with his imagination than love her mildly with his eyes wide open.

The "married-martyr" role used to be a man's winning card before the war; but there is something in the eyes of a man who has come back from "over there" that makes a Lothario's "secret sorrow" sound like a nursery rhyme.

When a brilliant man marries a plain, colorless, little thing with nothing to recommend her except a good disposition, it may be merely bad taste on his part—and then, again, it may be mighty good judgment.

A woman's success in the love-game depends on her ability to appear to be playing when she is in deadly earnest, and a man's on his ability to pretend to be in dead earnest when he is only playing.

When a man has finished telling a girl all about his ambitions and achievements, he will start right in and tell her all about his faults and failures, rather than stop talking about himself.

A man may live down the world's sneers or its frowns; but once it gets a good joke on him he can never outlive its smiles.

The corner cafe has gone—but the genial bachelor-friend with the well-stocked cellar is still every wife's mortal enemy.

When a Girl Marries

A NEW SERIAL OF YOUNG MARRIED LIFE

By Ann Lisle

"THEN that's all right," I replied, with a feeling of great relief.

"But it isn't!" protested Phoebe frantically. "If I were going to marry him it would be all right—my letting him—carry my stocks. But last night he—grabbed me and kissed me. It's horrible to be kissed by—the wrong man. So that's how I knew I never could marry him. And I told him so. And he said if he wasn't anything to me what would people say about my taking money from him."

"The cad!" I muttered. And in a flash my doubts of Dick West crowded back multiplied a hundredfold. I remembered Terry and smiled grimly. This time Dick West wasn't going to prove an alibi and his own nobility.

"There's more," cried Phoebe. "There's much more. And that's why I have to get that thousand dollars, no matter—how. Whatever what do I think people will say about Virginia—separated from her husband, and living a man pay her debts while she squanders Pat's money on herself. I could stand their talking about me, but if it comes to Virginia——"

"I'll have to marry Dick West—I'll have to, Anne—unless you find a way out!"

Dick West a Cad

"Dick West is a cad!" I said disgustedly to Phoebe. "First he gets you fathoms deep into his debt. Then he asks you to marry him and makes ugly insinuations about what people will say of your owing him money if you don't. That's absurd, so don't let it worry you. And when he goes as far as to drag Virginia in, I think he's a regular blackmailer."

"Then you don't think he could make me out a dreadful sort of girl that every one would turn away from?" cried Phoebe.

"Of course not, child," I replied in a matter-of-fact tone. "I think you ought to be spanked for gambling and stood in the corner for ever thinking Dick West was to be trusted. But you've been foolish and reckless, not criminal. So now wipe that desperate look from your face, while I think our way out."

Phoebe smiled wistfully through a tiny veil of tears. I thanked her guardian angels that she was still a child at heart and didn't see the ugly possibilities of her story. If Dick West wanted to force her to marry him in order to avoid gossip, he would still have the whip-hand when she had paid off her debt. Paying the debt wouldn't change the fact that she'd once owed him money. If he were cad enough to talk, he'd still have the story of her gambling and borrowing to tell, even when the money was paid. It had to be paid—and at once. Still I didn't see how that would get her out of his power.

I could feel Phoebe's eyes fixed trustingly and hopefully on mine, as I sat reviewing the whole sorry business.

Here's your fruit lemonade. Drink it, dear," I said in a tone that didn't admit of defeat. "Then we'll go to the writing room and I'll fill the blank check I carry and you can turn it right over to your shylock. We'll pay half our debt and then attend to raising the rest. We're partners now, and we'll see this through to victory. Now drink your lemonade. It's really refreshing."

Phoebe raised her glass obediently to her lips, drank a dutiful swallow or two and put the glass down despiritingly.

"I can't, Anne. Don't make me. It's what Neal and I always ordered. I never touch it any more," she stammered shyly.

"And once you thought you could marry Dick West," I ventured.

Phoebe's face crimsoned.

"Do you think—do you think he would ever forgive me for—for the way I treated him that time he came back, and for this terrible scrape I've got into?" she asked breathlessly.

"Bless your heart, dear! You just say you're sorry, and he'll forget everything," I declared, happily foreseeing the good that might come out of all this evil. "Now it's all settled. You give Mr. West my check and tell him very firmly that you can't possibly marry him because you don't love him and wouldn't do him the injustice of marrying him without love. I'll go to Jim tonight with the whole story, and he'll get us the rest of our money——"

"Oh, no—not Jim!" Phoebe cried. "I couldn't bear to have my own brother know!"

"Jim, of course," I replied smiling away her objections. "He won't misjudge his baby sister, and he'll positively be grateful to find out what sort of man he's in partnership with. He'll be grateful to be saved from a big, raw deal some day. You'll see."

Going to Be Happy

"Oh, Anne, you make me believe I'm going to be happy again and not frightened and miserable all the time," murmured Phoebe, giving a little skip as she rose to leave the dining room. He's coming tonight—Dick West is, and I'll do just what you've said."

"You might try to stay friendly with him. No use having enemies," I warned, praying that even a scoundrel like Dick West would let Phoebe off without opening her eyes.

Then I went to the writing room, gave Phoebe the check that wiped out my bank account and hurried home.

The Valley of the Giants

By Peter B. Kyne

"YOU worked that racket on my father. Try it on me, and you'll answer to me—personally. Lay the weight of your finger on your successor, Mac, and you'll die in the county poor farm. No threats, old man! You know the Cardigans; they never blurt."

McTavish's glance met the youthful master's for several seconds; then the woods-boss trembled, and his gaze sought the office floor. Bryce knew he had his man whipped at last, and McTavish realized it, too, for quite suddenly he burst into tears.

"Dinna fire me, lad," he pleaded. "I'll gae back on the job an' leave whusky alone."

"Nothing doing, Mac. Leave whiskey alone for a year and I'll discharge your successor to give you back your job. For the present, however, my verdict stands. You're discharged."

"Who kens the Cardigan woods as I ken them?" McTavish blubbered. "Who'll swamp a road into timber sixty per cent. clear when the mill's running? An foreign orders an' the owd man's calling for clear logs? Who'll fell trees wi' the least amount o' breakage? Who'll get the work out o' them? Who'll——"

"Don't plead, Mac," Bryce interrupted gently. "You're quite through, and I can't waste any more time with you."

On His Way

"Ye dinna mean it, lad. Ye canna mean it."

"On your way, Mac. I loathe arguments. And don't forget your check."

"I maun see yer father aboot this. He'll nae stand for sic treatment o' an auld employe."

Bryce's temper flared up. "You keep away from my father. You've worried him enough in the past, you drunkard. If you go up to the house to annoy my father with your pleadings, McTavish, I'll manhandle you." He glanced at his watch. "The next train leaves for the woods in twenty minutes. If you do not go back on it and behave yourself, you can never go back to Cardigan woods."

"I will nae take charity from any man," McTavish thundered. "I'll nae bother the owd man, an' I'll nae go back to yon woods to live on yer bounty."

"Well, go somewhere, Mac, and be quick about it. Only—when you've reformed, please come back. You'll be mighty welcome. Until then, however, you're as popular with me that is, in a business way—as a wet dog."

"Ye're nae the man yer father was," the woods-boss half sobbed. "Ye has a heart o' stone."

"You've been drunk for fifteen days—and I'm paying you for it, Mac," Bryce reminded him gently. "Don't leave your check behind. You'll need it."

With a fine show of contempt and rage, McTavish tore the check into strips, and threw them at Bryce. "I was never a man to take charity," he roarer furiously, and left the office. Bryce called after him a cheerful good-by, but he did not answer. And he did not remain in town; neither did he return to his shanty in the woods. For a month his whereabouts remained a mystery; then one day Moira received a letter from him informing her that he had a Job knee-boiling in a shingle mill in Mendocino County.

CHAPTER XIX.

IN the interim Bryce had not been idle. From his woods-crew he picked an old- experienced hand—one Jabes Curtis—to take the place of the vanished McTavish. Colonel Pennington, having repaired in three days the gap in his railroad, wrote a letter to the Cardigan Redwood Lumber Company, informing Bryce that until more

Stocks Close Strong in New York; Less Pressure on Curb Oils in Boston; Markets Quiet

OILS ADVANCE AND STEELS FOLLOW

Middle States Makes Substantial Gain in the Petroleum List

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor

Stocks closed strong in New York, the rally which began in the first hour sustaining the market to the end. Middle States Oil was a feature, finishing with a substantial gain. Among other especially strong issues were American Woolen common, Baldwin, Chandler, International Paper, Shell Transport, Mexican Petroleum, Pan-American, Texas Co., Royal Dutch and Union Pacific. General Motors and Crucible made good recoveries.

It was stated that bankers are of the opinion that money strain is relaxing, and that while rates are likely to be firm for some time a better situation will exist next week. Heavy investment buying of standard stocks is said to be going on. Another statement read: "It seems only a question of days when another advance in rediscount rates is announced.

In the foreign exchange market demand sterling opened with ⅛ decline at $3.68¼, francs at 11.60 and lire at 13.70.

BETTER TONE AT OPENING.

The market tone at the opening was better than during late trading yesterday and the majority of active issues advanced this morning on initial sales. News that allied governments would permit trade with Soviet Russia was more encouraging evidently than rumors circulated 24 hours before that they were planning war upon the ruling faction in that revolution racked country. Oils improved at the outset, Middle States Oil, Pan-American and Royal Dutch advancing more than a point. Within a few minutes, however, another drive against this class was started and Mexican Petroleum and Texas Co. receded several points, while others sold below previous prices. Steels were irregular at the start, while motors and equipments displayed strength.

GREW WEAK QUICKLY.

The market weakened within half an hour. General Motors and Crucible receding the farthest. Covering orders received over night provided the market with early support but after speculators had evened-up on commitments it was found that demand for stocks was limited. Trading was of a professional character and most operators were bearish in view. But the market was governed by uncertainties and showed signs of rallying after the first hour reaction. Before the end of an hour, in fact, it showed strength, weakness and recovery. Coppers had an irregular beginning but advanced fractionally later. There was not much buying of these issues but it was of good character. It is said that they are being sought by investors and insiders. The metal surplus is being reduced so fast, according to reports, that it should not be long before copper is in big demand at a much higher price. Belief is spreading that copper mines will have a prosperous year. Rails were quiet but steady. Most of the business was in oils, steels, motors and equipments.

Boston Elevated Deficit

For the seventeen month ended with November last the Boston Elevated was operated at a net loss of $5,509,957, according to the report by the road's trustees. Receipts for the period totalled $37,981,034; operating expenses, $32,181,012, and the cost of service, $43,491,012. The deficit at the end of the seventeen months amounted to $5,342,255.

Field Appointed

On the recommendation of Corporation Counsel Arthur D. Hill, Mayor Peters has appointed Elias Field of No. 590 Centre street, Jamaica Plain, to the position of legislative counsel at a salary of $400 per month for such period as the Legislature may be in session during 1920. The appointment takes effect January 20.

Dies in Ireland

Concord Junction, Jan. 17.—Patrick Reilly of No. 1 Crest street, this town, has received word of the death of his uncle, Judge James O'Reilly, at his home, in Belleek, Ireland. Judge O'Reilly was more than ninety years of age.

Big Demand for Locomotives

The demand for locomotives is the greatest ever known. They are needed in Europe, Asia, South America and in this country. Tentative inquiries from American roads indicate that 2,000 are required in this country now.

Newsprint Exports

This country's newsprint exports in 1919, using figures for ten months as a basis, are estimated to have been double those for 1917.

DULL TRADING IN BOSTON MARKETS

Less Pressure on Oils When the Curb Exchange Opens

Irregular at the opening and later, prices on the Boston Stock Exchange showed little variation from the closing quotations of the preceding session. The market was dull as well as narrow. The storm, high money and a tendency to liquidate holdings of oil and other issues all contributed to depress sentiment and to divert interest from securities. Among stocks to advance a point or more were Agricultural Chemical and Waltham Watch. Favorable reports as to the earnings of the latter corporation account for the recent rise of its stock.

Fractional gains were made by American Telephone, American Woolen preferred, Mohawk, Davis Daly, North Butte, Swift & Co., Swift International, Waldorf and Boston & Maine.

Weakest issues were Massachusetts Gas, Carson Hill, Torrington and International Portland Cement. They receded from one to three points at their lowest, the largest loss being by Massachusetts Gas. It made a partial recovery before the close. Smaller losses were recorded against New Haven, Ventura, Mayflower-Old Colony, National Leather, Elder, Ohio Body, International Products and Gray & Davis.

CURB HAS NARROW OPENING.

The Curb was quiet at the start and had a generally narrow opening. There was less activity in oils. Among gains at the opening were 1 cent each by Arizona Extension and Silver Reef, Albany Divide 1-16 and Pioneer 1-16. Arizona Silver was off ⅝. Boston & Montana, Gilliland and Hecla Divide began unchanged.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES.

C. G. Gallo and Co. have opened a new office in the Worthington Building on Main street in Springfield. It has other branch offices also in New York, Philadelphia and Providence.

The First National Bank of Boston has been appointed registrar of the capital stock of the Orpheum Circuit, Inc., and of the preferred stock of the Lancaster Mills.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Boston will proceed at once to have its new bank building constructed at the site bounded by Pearl, Franklin and Oliver streets.

In their market comment Jones and Baker say the advance in the price of crude oil strengthens the position of leading companies and together with higher priced gasoline and kerosene brightens the prospects of the oil industry as a whole. "The latest price increase," it is remarked, "occurred in connection with various grades of Wyoming crude oil."

COST OF LIVING KEEPS ON CLIMBING

The high cost of living persists in mounting higher, although it is declared a menace to government and people. Explanations are varied and most of them valid, but without effect in reducing costs. The panacea is unpopular, being to work harder to increase production and to live frugally to keep down production.

Bradstreet's index of wholesale prices of foodstuffs shows that in the week ended January 9 the average was $5.24, the highest on record, and an increase of 22 cents in a year. The advance for this particular week over the immediately preceding week was 2.3 per cent.

$40,000 ADDED INCOME IS ART MUSEUM NEED

Trustees Ask Public Spirited Citizens to Answer Appeal

Forty thousand dollars additional income is needed annually to meet the current expenses of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, according to the annual report of Morris Gray, president of the trustees.

Mr. Gray declares that he believes the trustees "should present the needs of the museum clearly and strongly to the public generally, and should stand upon that appeal.

"Endowed with full knowledge," he adds, "the individual should be left to untrammelled decision."

"DRIVE" IS SHUNNED.

Mr. Gray says he does not believe in the "institution of a 'drive' similar to those so successfully used at times for other great charities, especially for those of broader public interest and understanding, and, in the case of colleges, particularly, of a deep hold upon the affection of graduates.'"

In this connection Mr. Gray declares that while larger contributions might be obtained by a "drive" the museum "does not desire contributions from them or from others that are in any degree reluctant or forced. It desires only contributions that are made for the cause and solely for the cause that the museum serves."

FEW ANNUAL SUBSCRIBERS.

"It is surprising," says President Gray in another part of his report, "that there should be only 1,667 annual subscribers out of the population of Greater Boston which the museum serves." He added that "it is surprising that so few out of the population of a great city realize the value to the civic life of the community of a great museum of fine arts, open free to all who choose to enter."

The deficit for the past year is $34,627.88, and is due partly to the increased cost of living. According to Mr. Gray 280,189 persons visited the museum, as against 211,189 the previous year.

MAYOR CHILDS TO SPEAK AT ST. PAUL'S, NEWTON

A special musical program has been prepared which will add greatly to the interest of the services.

T. F. SULLIVAN ESTATE WILL BE CONTESTED

Inquisitive Goat Costs Newton Man a Fine of $10

It was goat-getter's day in Newton court.

Peter Cassella, of No. 35 Cottage place, West Newton, possessed a good goat. It was a she goat and of the deadlier species than the male. Mrs. Sebastino Gorzonie, who lives across the street from Cassella, possesses an aversion for goats. So she put up a sign on her property reading, "No Trespassing, Persons or Animals," relying on its subtle message to carry out her wishes.

Cassella's goat wandered into the Gorzonie yard without requesting permission, where it immediately proceeded to butt into one of the trees.

Mrs. Gorzonie captured the goat and imprisoned it in her cellar. She then notified the police. The police came and arrested Cassella on a charge of "trespassing." After three hours, Mrs. Gorzonie released the goat.

In court Cassella was found guilty and paid a fine of $10.

He is unable to understand why the charge against him was not made to read, "property a-butting on the street."

CLINTON MARINE IN FIGHT WITH BANDITS

Clinton, Jan. 17.—Merton W. Lyman, son of Mrs. Anna B. Lyman of this town, is with the marines who were on Thursday attacked by Haitian bandits at Port au Prince. He was rated a sharpshooter with the outfit when it left the Boston Navy Yard on Thanksgiving Day last. His letters home had intimated that trouble with the bandits was to be expected.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN JANUARY 17, 1920 BOSTON

Help the Mothers to Care for Their Children

One of the interesting things in Governor Coolidge's inaugural address was what he said under the title of "Motherhood." We quote it:

For some years Massachusetts has been committed to the policy of aiding children by assisting the mother to care for them. This has proved to be a wise and beneficial policy. Institutional and family care have much to commend them, but no mother should be parted from her children on account of poverty alone. This policy may well be extended in its scope to the giving aid, nursing and medical care to needy expectant mothers. Motherhood should be honored, childhood protected. I earnestly recommend the extension of this relief through the same or like agencies as now administer mothers' aid. In our desire to assist those who come from other shores we must not neglect the native born. Coming into the royal estate of every American he should have a royal welcome. It was the wise men who bore gifts. A wise Commonwealth will not be neglectful of the days of nativity.

The American has urged this policy for a number of years.

The Governor's words must be gratifying to Miss Edna Lawrence Spencer, who, almost alone, has fought for relief to expectant mothers. Miss Spencer's bill last year was rejected by the Legislature and she gallantly attempted to appeal to the people, but the law requires many signers to a referendum petition and it was beyond the capacity of one lone woman. Now, perhaps, with the aid of the Governor, the cause for which she fought may be achieved.

Seems About Time to Call Out the Fire Department

The Jewish Encyclopaedia says:

In the country places of Lithuania, when a fire breaks out, it is customary for the rabbi to go out and stand in front of a building that is not burning and to extinguish the fire by speaking to it. "Varreden dem feier," it is called.

"May we not"—to use the presidential vernacular—call attention to the amazing prevalence of this practice today?

The whole world is on fire, politically and economically. The rabbis in our United States Congress have been talking for months and months.

Our captains of industry and our leaders of labor, our reformers and our I. W. Ws, our railroad presidents and our railroad passengers, our producers and our consumers, have been addressing the conflagration ever since the armistice was signed. Every Legislature, every civic organization, every legion, Democrats and Republicans, wets, drys, reds, whites and blues have been shouting or whispering to the flames, according to their vocal powers.

The statecraft of Europe seems to be entirely in the hands of Lithuanian rabbis. Rabbi Lloyd George is still talking to Ireland, Rabbi Clemenceau to Germany, Rabbis d'Annunzio, Lenine, Trotsky, Nitti, Venizelos, the Czecho-Slovaks, Socialists, financiers, memoirs-writers, retired admirals, ex-ambassadors—the whole pack and caboodle of them—are howling their heads off against the international fire. One can imagine fiddling Nero, on the other side of the Styx, asking gleefully, "Who's looney now?"

Oh, yes, there is a lot of activity going on, too. Tailors' conventions are putting an extra button on dress suits, kind-hearted organizations are crusading against smoking, short skirts, lingerie displays in shop windows and baseball on Sunday; music publishers are combining to make more money, the cost of living and traveling and dying is being steadily boosted, and—in short—all who are not busily occupied in talking to the fire seem to be working hard at pouring kerosene oil on the flames.

Can you not suggest some way of calling out the FIRE DEPARTMENTS?

143,000 Teachers in a Year Quit Underpaid Service

Secretary Lane did not overstate when he recently wrote:

The public school is the strongest weapon we possess against the enemies of liberty.

It is stronger than prisons, stronger than sedition laws, stronger than deportations, for it PREVENTS abuses of freedom. Prevention is always better and usually cheaper than trying to cure.

Yet last year in the United States 143,000 school teachers resigned to go into better paid work. They were starved out of the most useful work that men and women can do.

The Financial Chronicle says that 1,000 rural communities in New York State have been forced to close their schools because of a lack of teachers. It places the shortage at 5,000 in that State alone. In West Virginia more than 400 schools have closed for the same reason.

No such dearth of good teachers as now exists has been known since our public school system was founded.

Bear in mind what it means.

Once the home was well equipped to do the work of the school or to supplement it.

That is no longer true.

If today the average child is not well instructed in the school, the chances are against the home making good the deficit.

Our mode of living tends to cause us to expect and demand more and ever more of the school.

But the school is the teacher, not the building. Overload, unperpay the teacher and the school fails. Its shortcoming is at the expense of the next generation.

No institution can be expected to give good service when in one year 143,000 of its expert workers are crowded out by penury.

These figures ought to make every loyal American think deeply. They are infinitely more ominous than the activities of the so-called "reds" of which so much is made.

Neglect the public school and in a few years we shall have a crop of citizens who will be easily susceptible to revolutionary promptings.

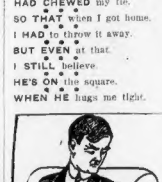
Ye TOWNE GOSSIP

Registered U. S. Patent Office.
By K. C. B.

THEY CALL him Brother.
BECAUSE HE'S two years old.
AND HAS a sister.
WHO IS four years old.
AND I know them both.
AND THEY call me uncle.
WHICH I'M really not.
THOUGH I will admit.
THAT IT pleases me.
AND EVERY little while.
I CALL on them
AND THEY make me read.
FROM SILLY books.
AND GET down on the floor.
AND MUSS my clothes.
AND THEN once in a while.
TO PAY for that.
THIS BROTHER boy.
CLIMBS ON my lap.
AND PUTS his cheek
CLOSE UP to mine.
AND JUST lies there.
AND ISN'T afraid.
OF A single thing
IN THE whole wide world.
AND HOWEVER I feel.
I DON'T quite know.
BUT IT'S mighty good.
AND YESTERDAY.
I CALLED on him.
AND WE had our romp.
AND READ strange things.
FROM a great big book.
WHERE ANIMALS dwell.
AND ROMPED some more.
TILL I got tired.
AND SAT me down.
IN A big arm chair.
AND BROTHER came.
AND CLIMBED on me.
AND GRUNTED a lot.
AND MADE the grade.
AND LOOKED me over.
AND KISSED me damply.
A COUPLE of times.
AND TIRED like.
LET HIS blond head rest.
AGAINST MY vest.
AND THERE he lay.
WITH HIS face tight pressed.
AND THE thrill of it.
WENT OVER me.
AND I held him close.
AND HIS mother said.
HOW GRAND he was.
AND I agreed.
AND WAS very glad.
THAT HE liked me so.
AND THERE he lay.
FOR THE longest time.
AND THEN looked up.
AND AROUND his mouth.
HE HAD turned to green.
WITH STRIPES of blue.
IN LIQUID form.
THAT TRICKLED down.
TO HIS clean white blouse.
AND I looked at myself.
AND THE sweet young thing.
HAD CHEWED my tie.
SO THAT when I got home.
I HAD to throw it away.
BUT EVEN at that.
I STILL believe.
HE'S ON the square.
WHEN HE hugs me tight.



I THANK you.

The Morgan Memorial and Its Work

By Randolph Wellford Smith

IT would take a page of the American to give even a brief summary of the almost countless departments. There are playrooms for children galore, schoolrooms in which are taught basketry, dressmaking, housekeeping, shoemaking, carpentry; and pretty nearly every department of human life is represented in one way or the other. I was trying to think up something that was not earmarked somewhere around the great establishment. I had it, I thought finally. There was nothing that had to do with courts or tribunals, when, by the Lord Harry, I happened to glance over my shoulder, and there was a sign:

LEGAL ADVICE
FREE TO ALL
6 TO 7:30
EVERY EVENING

There is a beautiful church, called "the Church of All Nations," an industrial farm at South Athol, immense dormitories for men and children, and a garage. The Memorial has eight enormous power trucks that are constantly hauling in the bags filled with castoff clothing, furniture and inanimate things of every possible description that, under ordinary circumstances, would have seemed to entirely have lost usefulness. When the bags arrive they are thrown on a sorting table. Everything that comes out of them is made to serve some good purpose.

There was a rope strung across one of the rooms. Some forty or fifty corsets were hanging therefrom.

"Have you a corsetiere also," I asked.

"Not exactly," replied Mr. Moore, "those corsets came in the bags. They are washed and cleaned and mended and made antiseptic. Then they are sent downstairs to the store, where they find ready purchasers among the women of the vicinity."

Every Scrap Used

Every infinitesimal scrap of ostensible nothingness is made to serve some good purpose. A woman comes to the Memorial with a babe in her arms. Her husband is a drunkard or out of work or lost to some one of a thousand human ills. Or, perhaps, he has just disappeared off the map. The woman is put to work in one of the several departments; the child is sent to Miss Fagin, who has had charge of the day nursery for many years.

"She is a perfectly wonderful woman," announces my companion, the Bag Man. "She can quiet the worst child. They learn to love her in a twinkling."

A statement not difficult to entertain, it is ascertained as we drift into another playroom. There are a score of little tots playing on the floor with rag dolls and toys of all descriptions. There are representations of all nations in the throng, but they are playing together in rhythmic unison. I see among them scions of distant peoples that, to my certain knowledge, have been at war for centuries.

It makes no difference. Miss Fagin has rubbed her magic charm, and all is peace. The Chinese baby and the little daughter of Italy rub noses in amity after a fashion that might furnish Senator Lodge and some of his cohorts in the Senate a valuable object lesson. It is the same way in the settlement. The clubrooms of the Syrians, Portuguese and other nationalities adjoin each other or at best are distant only across the hall. And all the peoples dwell together in unity and good fellowship.

Americanization

Among its many other incomparable, enhancing purposes the Morgan Memorial is the most profound illustration of the practical and utilitarian possibilities of Americanization. For fifty or more years we have been dumping on these shores the deiris of all Europe. New England has had need for a multitude of those human souls in her factories and big industries, but absolutely no provision was made for their welcome, except the open factory door on Monday morning, where as little wage was paid as possible until quite recently, when there has been alarming change to the other side of the ledger.

Lax Business Methods of the City Probed

SOME of the charges of waste, extravagance and bad management of Boston's city business made in the Legislature and before the City Council recently were the basis of an investigation, the results of which are set forth in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser. It is a plain, unbiased statement of facts, from which the taxpayer—and every man, woman and child is a taxpayer, of course, whether or not a real estate owner—can form an opinion of how efficiently his money is handled for municipal purposes.

The publication of the Boston Sunday Advertiser's inquiry into alleged padding of the city payrolls aroused much comment and apparently has already had some effect. The Mayor has taken action to get rid of "deadwood" and abolish unnecessary salary lists, which should make a beginning of real saving.

In tomorrow's article on lax business methods in city work there are many things to make the taxpayer think and arouse public opinion to calling for immediate reform in certain respects. The facts are drawn from public documents which cannot be disputed, as were those about department payrolls. The Boston Sunday Advertiser presents them as a way of helping as best it can those who are trying to find ways of getting more for the people without constantly calling for more of their money.

"It only remains for the representatives of the Democratic idea to obliterate the distinction between murder on a small scale and murder by wholesale to bring the Kaiser within the terms of universal law," asserts William Jennings Bryan.

"Let the trial go on, that history may be correctly written; that guilt may be equitably apportioned among the wrongdoers; that kingly irresponsibility may never again be pleaded; that the German people may not be punished for the sins of arbitrary rulers, and that the Kaiser himself may have meted out to him such punishment as he deserves or be acquitted if the facts show him to be innocent."

Frederick H. Prince, the noted Boston banker who studied conditions abroad while representing Massachusetts in France, has written for the Boston Sunday Advertiser an article in which he declares:

"France and England are perfectly able to take care of themselves. They don't need the help of the United States; they are not bankrupt.

"A certain class of Englishman is still a little sore over the fact that the United States came into the war and cleaned the thing up so quickly. But he is making a lot of money.—All that's needed is a good arrangement on international exchange."

While labor unionism is torn by factions, there also exist wide differences of policy and program among employers, writes Ray Stannard Baker in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. The noted author analyzes Judge Gary, head of the huge United States Steel Corporation. He calls him a "benevolent autocrat," who "has done much for the bodily comfort of his men; of the soul of the modern worker he seems never to have had a glimpse."

Gilbert K. Chesterton, the noted English author, asserts that the League of Nations will only make enemies among friends. He declares the Paris pact is driving the allies apart instead of uniting them, and attacks "the illusions of the cosmopolitans" at the Peace Conference.

Those who talk of an understanding between England and America do so in the hope it will harm France, says Mr. Chesterton.

The comments of Sir John Foster Frazer on the opposition in the United States to the Peace Treaty and the League of Nations are particularly illuminating. In a cable dispatch sent from this side to his paper, the Empire News of London, he admits that suspicion of British diplomacy has blocked the treaty in the Senate.

"This time last year all America favored a society of nations," says Sir John. "Today the idea is still thought to be a good one, but not if America is going to pay most of the expenses and have a restrained voice in the association."

"To force a new constitution on the Irish seems almost insane," says Lord Cecil. The British statesman proposes an open convention, all delegates to be chosen proportionately by the parliamentary electorate, who shall frame a government plan to be submitted to the British Parliament.

When all of the Irish have agreed on a constitution, says Lord Cecil, then it is time for the English to pass on the scheme; but it should be made an essential condition of passing the Irish bill, he asserts, that it shall be "formally and unequivocally accepted either by an Irish referendum, or by some other not less indisputable assent on behalf of the people."

Guglielmo Marconi, Italian senator and inventor of the wireless telegraph, declares that a revolution in Italy is no more a possibility than in any of the other allied nations. In a special article Marconi points out that, with the prolonging of the uncertainty attending the peace settlement, the situation is dangerous. He declares, however, that with the good will of America the Adriatic question will be brought to an early solution.

Shall America or England collect the huge inheritance tax assessed against the $60,000,000 real estate owned in New York by the late Viscount Astor?

William Waldorf Astor, an expatriate, transferred before his death all his New York property to his sons, who have also become aliens to their native land. Viscount Astor, it is believed, intended his estate should escape payment of $15,000,000 inheritance tax.

Fashionable society lacks "real men," according to Mrs. Edward Matthew Roberts, million dollar divorcee, who is honeymooning with a brand new soldier-husband.

Boston folk will be interested in her views on life and men. Her story of disillusioned love and happy romance will appear in the Sunday Boston Advertiser.

The favorite tactics the "unspeakable Turk" employed in dealing with Armenian captives during the past four years, especially with young girls, are revealed in thrilling detail by two Armenian girls who have just arrived in the United States.

Letters to the Editor

Takes Exception

DENISON HOUSE,
82 Tyler Street.
January 14, 1920.

Editor Boston American:

In the Boston American for last Friday, Saturday, Monday and Tuesday an article by Randolph Wellford Smith, "South End Kitchen for the Poor," made mention several times of Denison House. In the issue of Tuesday Mr. Smith includes what purports to be an interview with one of the "young college women of Denison House," and puts into her mouth some very remarkable statements about the work of settlements. As a matter of fact, no interview has, so far as I can discover, been given to Mr. Smith nor to any other reporter from the American this Fall, and I regret extremely that the American should have given publicity to such statements.

In protest against this type of article I should like to state that the workers at Denison House share the indignation of the whole neighborhood over so unjustified and misleading a description of the district. We have not petitioned the Governor, the Mayor nor the street-cleaning department, nor do we feel that our street is "reek in filth." We do not feel that "one administration at the City Hall has been just like any other, no better, no worse," nor are we accustomed to speak of the present City Hall officials as "gangsters." It seems strange to speak of the social agencies of the district as being of mushroom growth, as most of them have been at work for more than twenty years.

GERALDINE GORDON,
Headworker.
